SCION OF WEALTHY WARD FAMILY HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

Son Of Baking Co. Head
Confesses Killing Of An Alleged Blackmailer
VICTIM IDENTIFIED

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 22.—Walter S. Ward, 31, son of the head of the Ward Baking Co., surrendered to sheriff George Werner here today and confessed, according to an announcement from the sheriff's office that he shot and killed Clarence Peters, former navy man, whose body was found near here recently.

The shooting according to Ward's reported confession, occurred last Tuesday. The body, which was found near Kensico reservoir, was identified from scars by aid of naval records. Ward, whose father is the head of one of the biggest baking concerns in New York, lives in New Rochelle. The elder Ward was widely known over the country a few years ago as one of the biggest financial backers of the Federal baseball league. Ward according to the sheriff said he had been the victim of a blackmail plot. Thru this plot he had been lured to a spot on the Port Chester Road and there Peters asked him to drive to the reservoir. Arriving at the reservoir, Ward's story continued, two other men drove in a car and threatened him with revolvers. The shooting followed, altogether eight shots being exchanged. One of the shots killed Peters, he said. The blackmail plot dealt with himself and family, he said. A formal charge of homicide was made against the young man and he was released on $10,000 bail. The body of the slain man remained unidentified for several days but has now been sent to his home in Haverhill, Mass. Sheriff Werner declined to discuss the basis of the blackmail. He said Ward declared Peters had obtained several sums of money from him.

The man who was shot was known as "Pete," the sheriff said. Identification has revealed that he was Clarence Peters, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge Peters, of Haverhill, Mass.

LATE FLASHES

MEXICO CITY, May 22.—The Mexican war office today is making plans for the opening of a widespread campaign against the rebels in the state of Tabasco. A squadron of airplanes is under orders to join the Federals. Reinforcements of infantry and cavalry are on their way. Fighting has broken out near Villa Hermosa and the fate of the city is in doubt.

LONDON, May 22.—Great Britain is making friendly representations to Japan looking to the evacuation of Russian territory by Japanese troops to avert a clash between the Russians and Japanese in the East. Government Spokesman Austen Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons this morning.

LONDON, May 22.—Up to noon the foreign office had received no confirmation of reports that revolution has broken out in Bulgaria and that King Boris has fled. Advice concerning the reported uprising were conflicting. One report was that the Communists were in power; another was that the adherents of Stamboulinski, the "peasant premier" had united with the Communists and declared a republic.

BULGARIAN officials in continental Europe denied the revolutionary reports.

MOSCOW, May 22.—Pestilence and famine are increasing in their devastation of the Kuban and Crimean regions of Russia, it was declared today by American Relief Administration workers, who have just arrived here from the field. They said that seed grain is arriving too late in Kuban and Crimea to be of material assistance. A plague of locusts is adding to the trials of the stricken populace.

BELFAST, May 22.—Belfast emerged today from another bloody week-end, during which at least 14 persons were killed and many more were wounded. The roar of bursting bombs and the popping of rifle and revolver fire rose almost to battle intensity at times.

REJECT FORD OFFER, DRAFT OWN LEASE, ENGINEER ADVISES

WASHINGTON, May 22.—The government would lose from $1,275,000, 000 to $1,475,000, 000 if the Muscle Shoals waterpower project were leased to Henry Ford under the terms of his present offer, Hugh L. Cooper, army engineer who built the dam, told the senate agriculture committee today. Cooper urged the senate committee to draft its own lease, and termed the many offers made for the project "just plain foolishness."

He declared the government would be the loser if it accepted any of them.

"Strive For The Best" Calls Forth Constructive Thought And Sound Advice

Grace M. E. church was filled to its fullest capacity Sunday evening for the annual Baccalaureate service, honoring the graduating class of '22 from the Coshocton high school.

Following the invocation by the Rev. H. E. Truitt, the Methodist Male Quartet sang, "Crossing the Bar," followed by the scripture reading by the Rev. William M. Har. Preceding the prayer by the Rev. W. C. Prewitt, the high school girls quartet, composed of the Misses Margaret Robson, Dorothy Riley, Nellie Lorenz and Janice Richardson was heard in a vocal number.

The Rev. Paul Saleste, pastor of St. John's Evangelical church delivered the sermon, using as his subject the class motto, "Strive for the Best."

"Life is a treasure held in trust—life is a plan of God. It is the most serious business in the world and must be lived according to the principles tested by the ages, tested by men of experience," began the Rev. Mr. Saleste.

"The longest life is too short if it doesn't lead to the best," he continued, "and earnestness is the only passport to the satisfactory life."

"He urged the graduates who are just entering upon their new walks of life to make the best and most of self and do what they can with what God has given them."

HARDING STAYS AWAY FROM DEDICATION OF WOMAN'S PARTY HOME

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Feminine political circles here were buzzing with excitement and speculation today over the mystery that has developed because of the failure of President Harding to attend the dedication ceremonies Sunday of the new headquarters of The National Woman's Party.

A note from the white house addressed to Mrs. John Gordon Batelle, of Columbus, Ohio, and announcing that the president would be unable to attend, arrived just an hour before the ceremonies started. The note was signed by the president himself, but it contained no explanation of his reasons for not attending.

Charges were made today at the headquarters of the Woman's Party that the League of Women Voters which has been warring against the party, had influenced the president to change his mind at the eleventh hour. It is known that representatives of the league called at the white house sometime after it was announced the president had accepted the invitation to the ceremonies to urge him to stay away.

The white house remained silent today concerning the affair, no explanation being forthcoming of the president's reasons for changing his mind, but Miss Edith Alice, of Jamestown, N. Y., and other leaders of the Woman's Party, announced that they would "demand an explanation."

Mrs. Kate Richards O'Hare, leader of the "Children's Crusade" who is demanding amnesty for so-called political prisoners, advanced the opinion today that he stayed away because the children who have been trying unsuccessfully to see him at the White House would be present. He must have heard at the White House that the children were there to interview him.

The mystery surrounding the failure to attend the ceremonies is deepened by the fact that less than two hours before Mr. Harding's note was received, white house secret service men arrived at the headquarters and took the usual precautions for the protection of the president. But the president didn't show up. Miss Sue White, of Tennessee, was well pleased with the turn of events. "We had the protection of the president's secret service, the street cars stopped as we wished them to, and the Marine Band played in the president's honor," Miss White said. "What more could we want?"

SPECIAL TAX LEVY PLAN COMES UP AT TONIGHT'S SESSION

Whether Coshocton voters will be asked to vote an extra tax levy to pay present indebtedness or not will probably be decided upon by the city council at its regular meeting Monday evening.

Plans were being made Monday afternoon for a discussion of the question. At a caucus meeting of the city council, held several weeks ago, all members expressed themselves in favor of such action. Mayor W. S. Tish is in favor of an extra levy, also.

One proposal is to ask a two and one-half or three mill levy for a period of three years. It is estimated that this extra amount would suffice to clean up the city's indebtedness, and to put it on an even basis again.

Another proposal is to place the sinking fund on the tax duplicate as a separate item, and allow the trustees to assess the necessary tax each year, instead of taking their money from the city's share. This plan, it has been estimated, would increase the city's funds by approximately $26,000 for the next year.

The factors of Cambridge are to be asked to vote an extra levy of one and one-half mills at the August election. A recommendation for such action was made by the council finance committee of that city and was adopted by the council, recently.

WRANGLER ISLAND IS RUSSIAN PROPERTY, STATE DEPT. FINDS

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Wrangel Island, lying off the coast of Siberia, claimed for Canada by the arctic explorer Steffanson, is in reality the property of Russia, according to the conclusion reached today by the United States government following an investigation started some weeks ago by the state department.

Several American vessels visited the island during the past fifty years, including two warships of the American navy, but the title of the United States to ownership by right of discovery is not clear, the investigation proved.

WITNESS IS CALLED

Joseph Shannon, employed at the Grand Confectionery, has been subpoenaed as a witness in the case of the State of Ohio against Jack Zuber, which will be heard in Cadiz, Wednesday, May 24.

BREST, France, May 22.—Captain Barzic, commander of the French freighter Zine, which rammed and sank the Peninsular & Oriental liner Egypt on Saturday night, with the loss of 98 lives was severely criticized at the opening of the inquest today because after the collision he reversed his engines, backing his ship and thus opened up the hole in the Egypt's hull.

Captain Barzic was accused of violation of the unwritten laws of the sea by removing his vessel instead of putting on full steam ahead to keep the hole closed to the rush of water. The inquest is being conducted by Vice-Admiral Schwerer, Brest maritime prefect. He pointed out that there were conflicting statements in the stories told by the seamen of the Egypt and Zine. At least some of the victims were Americans but the exact number is not yet known.

Captain Barzic vigorously defended his action, denying that if he had not backed his ship away, the death list would have been smaller. The Zine was making less than five knots an hour, when she struck the Egypt. Amidships Captain Barzic told the court. "It was more than twenty minutes before we were able to find the Egypt after I had backed up. The fog was dense." According to the captain of the Egypt, that ship had stopped her engines and was stationary when she was rammed. The sea was calm, but the fog was so thick that the vessel kept her sirens going. The Zine was blowing her sirens also.

The second steamship accident on the French coast in 48 hours was reported today, when news was received here that the freighter Saint Paris had gone ashore in the fog off Cape Lizard. An inquest has been commenced over the 98 men and women who lost their lives in the sinking of The Peninsular and Oriental liner Egypt by the French freighter Zine on Saturday night. An investigation has been ordered to ascertain (Continued On Page Seven)

VALENTINO DECISION WILL BE PRECEDENT FOR SIMILAR CASES

LOS ANGELES, May 22.—Dolopho Valentino, "Romeo" of the movies, who faces the serious charge of bigamy for his "too-soon" marriage to Winifred Hudnut, known in filmdom as Natacha Rambova, may never come to trial.

The habeas corpus loomed today as the possible avenue of escape for the dashing film hero. District Attorney Thomas Lee Woolwine and his assistants are preparing to combat such a move on the part of the defense, it was learned. Should such a writ be obtained Valentino may never face a preliminary hearing now scheduled for June 1.

It was admitted the Valentino case may prove a means of securing a different decision that California baristers have long wanted, as it is said to be the first complaint involving an international marriage in this state. The point the higher courts will be asked to adjudicate is whether it is legal for a person to marry under the laws of another country before having received a final decree from a previous marriage in this state, and then come within the bounds of California and reside with their latest mate.

Two important developments were scheduled to take place in the case today.

First, Detective Sergeant Edward King, who has been making a crack thru Imperial Valley over "The Honey-moon Trail" was expected to make a detailed personal report to Woolwine.

Second, Jean Acker, first wife of Valentino, from whom he secured an interlocutory decree of divorce last January, who has been ill ever since the Valentino investigation started, was expected to be able to be questioned today.

The Hearst Pageant

MR. HEARST'S pursuit of the New York governorship and subsequently of the presidency, we are given to understand, is to be purely a matter of theatricals. The self-nominated burden-bearer of the people is going away for two months for the very necessary reason that this must be done in order that he may come back. And the coming back is to be the test of the performance.

While he is abroad seasoned political bosses will be diligently preparing the spontaneous demand of the people. Mr. Hearst will run on a platform of high wages, increased employment, lower living costs, reduced gas, telephone and electric rates, the 5-cent fare and the whole catalog of unfulfilled human wants, which might logically include milder winters for New York, barkless dogs and boneless bass. So well drilled will be the persons of the drama that when Mr. Hearst on his return is met in the harbor by spontaneous demand with the screaming of whistles, the booming of guns and the unfurling of colors the celebrated returns of history, that were not always successful in restoring their heroes to ultimate triumph, will be forgotten.

There is one point of vulnerability in the pageant method of modern king-making, however, that turns away the best laid plans of journalists and politicians. Every actor must play his part or the show is ruined. If vox populi fails to vox and spontaneous demand fizzles to a faint claque, if the people decide to leave the economic laws and the planets under present management, the results of the pageant are sure to be disappointing.

The President As Law Maker

CONGRESS has been so constantly engaged in delegating its legislative powers to Federal boards, bureaus and commissions that it is not surprising to find it now abdicating a part of its taxing power to the President in the proposed new tariff bill.

This bill lays certain duties on imports, but, instead of stopping there, it goes on to authorize the President to change these duties, up or down, as much as 50 per cent either way, whenever there appears to him any occasion "to equalize the difference in competition in trade in the United States." The Senate Finance Committee seeks to justify this remarkable transfer of taxing power to the President by citing the McKinley tariff bill of 1890 as a precedent. An examination of that measure, however, shows nothing to sustain its claim.

The McKinley bill placed sugar, molasses, tea, coffee and hides on the free list, but it added that whenever the President found any country not granting reciprocity these articles should bear certain stated duties. The transfer of these articles from the free list to the status of dutiable objects was not left to presidential discretion but occurred automatically upon the ascertainment of a fact. Congress, not the President, fixed the rates, which it alone has the constitutional power to do.

In the pending bill, however, it is intended not only that the President shall inquire into competitive cost prices, but that he shall fix the rates conformably thereto within certain limits. Obviously, if Congress is competent to empower the President to fix duties within any limits he may be legally authorized to fix them without any limitation whatever. And this is the whole legislative power to tax.

There is this serious aspect to any plan contemplating the executive as a law maker: that however unjust or oppressive his acts may be they are not reviewable by the courts, as was early decided in the case of Marbury against Madison. As the head of the executive power he is wholly exempt from process.

Some day we shall have a Congress comparable to the Long Parliament of 1640, which will restore constitutional government in this country, and there are signs that it is not far distant.

Et Tu, Pennsylvania!

THE ST. LOUIS POST DISPATCH, independent, in commenting on the Pinchot victory in Pennsylvania has the following interesting comment on the revolt of the masses in that state against machine rule:

Gifford Pinchot's nomination for Governor in the Republican primary of boss-ridden Pennsylvania is a victory that will hearten the liberal ranks everywhere throughout the country. The victory is made more impressive and stimulating by the fact that five members of the congressional delegation, regulars all, were defeated.

The Beveridge triumph in Indiana, encouraging as it was, was almost a minor note compared with the diapason of the Pennsylvania blast. The two declarations of independent thinking, coming so closely together, are pretty good proof that the pendulum, which touched the extreme of reaction in 1920, is swinging sweepingly back.

Quite apart from the new resolve of Pennsylvania's citizenship there are circumstances that must, in fairness and accuracy, be taken into account in measuring the result. There was mutiny within the "dark forces" themselves. In a survey of the situation more than a week ago this discussion was stressed by a reporter for the New York World, who predicted the probability of Pinchot's nomination.

Pinchot's opponent, Attorney-General Alter, the choice of the Philadelphia bosses, was persona non grata, it seems, to the Pittsburgh bosses. The latter, it was explained, sent this defiant message to Philadelphia: "You picked him. Let's see you put him over." And there was no leadership equal to the task of reconciling the warring factions. The genius who might, perhaps, have done it, has been sleeping tranquilly since New Year's.

Yet despite its internal row the ring would probably have won if there had not been a definite popular revolt and a candidate who could inspire the revolt with confidence and galvanize it into decisive action. Something of an eccentric from the conventional, laissez-faire viewpoint, for years the sharpest thorn in the Penrose flesh, more highly esteemed at large, it may be, than at home, Gifford Pinchot was the man of the hour. He made a bare-knisted fight. He charged the administration upon whose party ticket he was running with grievous delinquencies. He went into incriminating details of financial jugglery. He pointedly wanted to know who were the beneficiaries of those irregularities. He submitted the mounting costs of the State's government as conclusive evidence of the incompetence, extravagance and corruption of the powers that be at Harrisburg. He promised a new deal.

The Republicans of Pennsylvania have certified to the indictment. They have taken Pinchot at his word. They have brot their State out of the shadow of political feudalism into the light, prospectively, of free, responsible government.

New York Day-By-Day

NEW YORK, May 22.—A page from the diary of a modern Samuel Pepys: even. Experts say the passion for Up bitimes. Reine Davies, Marion's sister, stopped in, her gasoline wagon having broken down and we talked a bit. Walked to a gallery and did bemoan the want of money for a landscape, thence to the water front to see ships put merrily out to sea.

With V. Porter to a midday snack, very neat, and E. Mansfield he took to take us to see a cinema, privately shown, and here came Richard Barthelmess and his players and watched themselves upon the screen, all very merry too.

Home and laboured awhile and afterward out with my wife and gazed at the shop windows and got a book of verses, which she promised to read to me. Saw Claude Graham-White and his wife Ethel Levey and listened to some Welsh singers, mighty sweet.

In the evening to R. Long's to eat corned beef and cabbage, being home thrice, and then to watch Peggy Marsh dance and came Mae Murry, Laurette Taylor and many others. Going home our public vehicle struck a street post, the driver being giddy from drink, we believed, but no one hurt. And so to bed.

Fifth Avenue was startled the other afternoon by the appearance of a Mid-Victorian relic—one of those old Princess style automobiles with the placket in the back. A woman with puff sleeves and a hat that perched on a mountainous coiffure guided the machine with the handle-bar. She looked much like the Gibson girl of the same automobile period. There was great mystery about the affair but the story is that the woman is an expert golfer and wagered her opponent that if she lost a certain game she would drive down Fifth Avenue in the old automobile and the costume that suited the same historical cycle.

HARDING TO KEEP HANDS OFF BONUS

WASHINGTON, May 22.—President

Harding will keep "hands off" the enactment of bonus legislation by the senate, it was stated today by administration senators who have discussed it with him at the white house this week.

The president, tiring of inactivity on the bonus by majority members of the senate finance committee, has sent this word to administration leaders. He informed the senate leaders that they would have to pass a bonus bill without instructions from the white house.

The president, it was learned, also indicated he would not pass judgment on any bonus measure until it was enacted by the senate and sent to him formally for his signature. This position was taken by the president, it was said, to end rumors that his delay in writing Senator McCumber, chairman of the senate finance committee had held up the bonus bill.

Contrary to purported statements,

WALT MASON

POP ANSON

The grand old man has gone to sleep, to rest his weary frame, and as our motto we should keep his watchword, "Play the game." "A game's not finished till it's done," Pop Anson used to say; and more than once the game was won that seemed all foiled away. I've read the works of many seers, of sages gray and wise, and in those works no rede appears more grateful to the eyes than Old Pop Anson's "Play the game," when things were all askew, and players, lacking in aim, were grouchy, sore and blue. Confucius sat upon a fence and reeled off sound advice, and ancient Greeks, possessed of sense, put up much useful ice; and Romans, too, in olden times, made words of wisdom fly, in epigrams and sounding rhymes that were not meant to die. And these old patriarchs, indeed, piled up a deathless fame; but none gave forth a finer rede than Anson's "Play the game!" Let's paste this motto in our hats as down this world we slide, and in our bellies fewer hats will afterwards abide. And it will make our quarrels brief, we'll gain the world's regard, and we will dodge a lot of grief that makes the sledding hard. The winds will sigh, the rain will drop, above his sleeping frame, but we'll remember good old Pop, and try to play the game.

Amundsen To Sail On Arctic Trip June 3

SEATTLE, May 22.—Captain Roald Amundsen, Arctic explorer, who will attempt to drift "over the top," passing the North Pole, will leave Seattle for Nome, Alaska, aboard the steamship Victoria June 3.

The Maud, the ship in which Captain Amundsen hopes to make his trip, will leave here June 1, giving the explorer time to look after the last details of the trip here. He will arrive at Nome two days in advance of the Maud, so that he will have time in the Alaska city to make final arrangements for dog teams and other necessities of the long Arctic exploration.

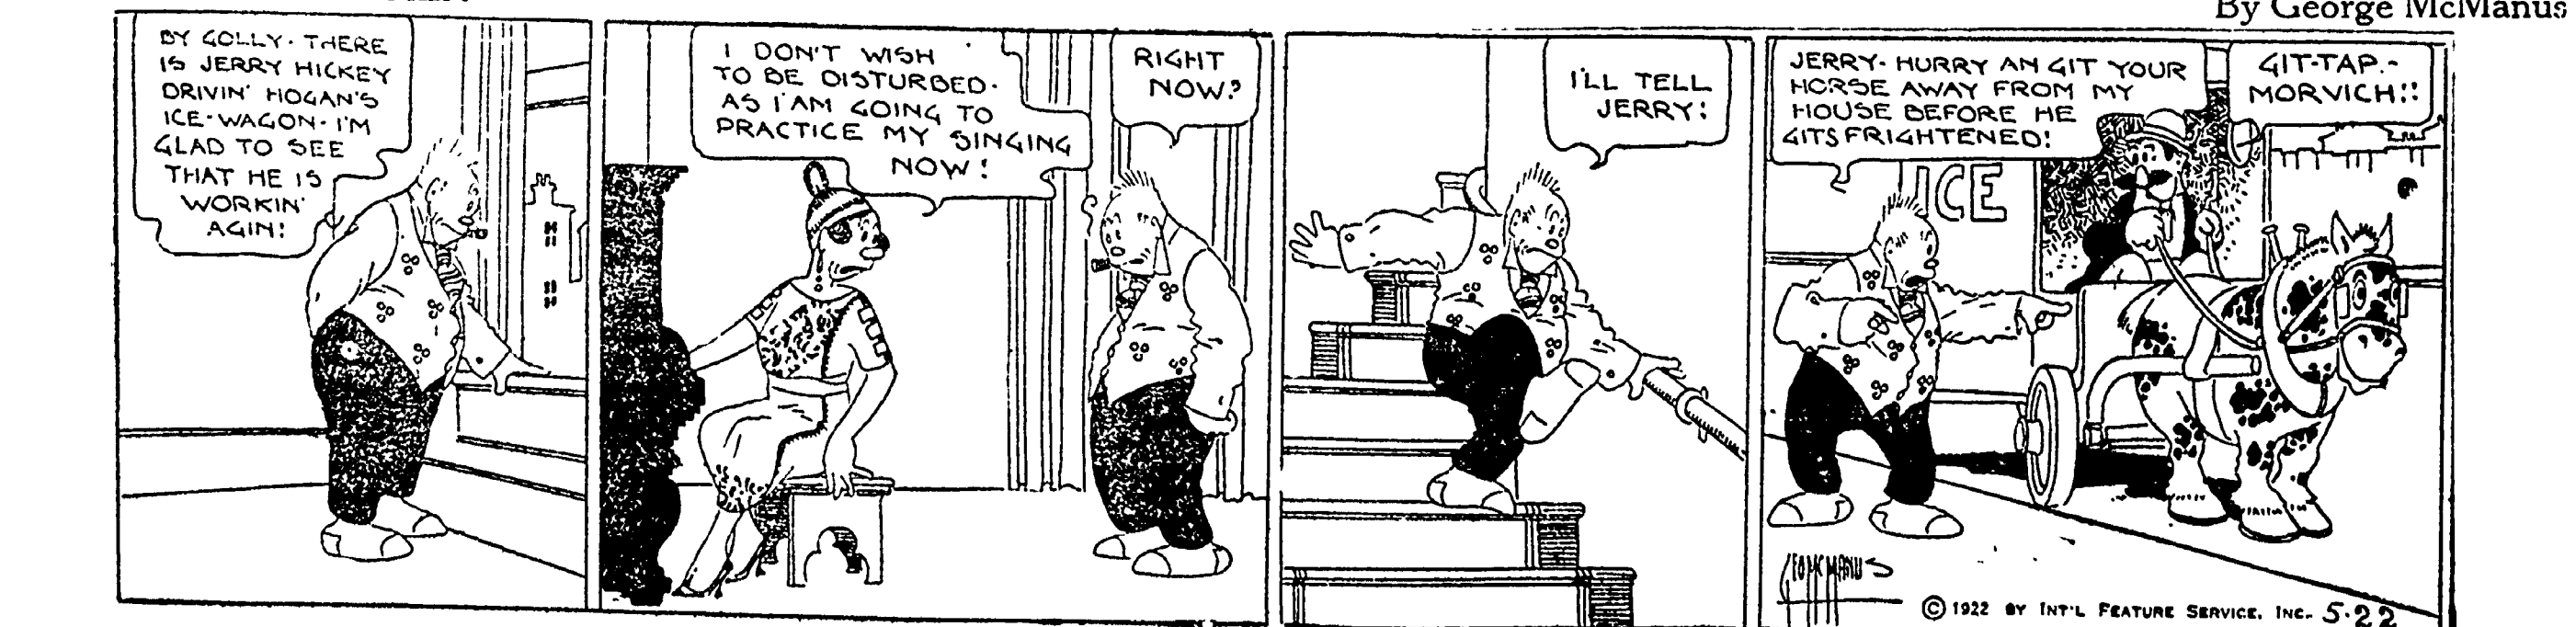

Two airplanes which Captain Amundsen will use in the Polar regions are now en route from New York. They will be tried out here upon arrival, it was said.

MAY 20 LAST CALL FOR CORN PLANTING

College Compiles Experience Of Champion Growers—Thick Sowing Favored

The experience of the best corn farmers in Ohio, compiled from the records of the State 10-Acre Contest, sustains two findings of the Ohio Experiment Station, now timely. First, corn planted later than May 20 falls off in yield. Second, drilled corn generally does a little better than corn which is "checked" or hilled.

Farm crops workers of the Ohio State University have taken the records of the 93 farmers, in the five contests which have been held since 1917. Of these farmers, 50 drilled their corn, and averaged yields of 99 1/2 bushels to the acre. The other 43 farmers checked in planting, and got 95 bushels to the acre.

"While detailed figures are not worked out," continues Wallace E. Hanger, the crops specialist making the report, "the records show a direct relation between thickness of sowing and rate of yield. By and large the men who have done best are those who have planted to get a large No. of stalks to the acre. Corn checked 3 feet 6 inches each way, 3 stalks to the hill, gives about 10,600 stalks to the acre. Corn drilled about a foot apart in rows 3 1/4 feet wide allows 12,500 stalks to the acre, not a bit too many for fairly good land.

"The records show beyond question that corn planted before May 5, or after May 20, is almost certain to yield less than plantings made between these dates.

AGED WOMAN WHO LIVED ALONE IS CHOKED TO DEATH

CLEVELAND, May 22. — Police today are seeking the stranger who early yesterday entered a home at 3305 West 50th-st and choked to death Mrs. Francis Svozil, 70. Absence of an apparent motive for the crime makes the work of detecting the murderer more difficult. The aged woman lived alone in the house and when the blind of her bedroom remained closed, neighbors saw her there. She was drawn through the afternoon, neighbors sent word to her that "something was wrong" as Mrs. Svozil was always an early riser and a regular church attendant.

The investigation disclosed that the house had been ransacked, but apparently nothing of value was missing. This is the second murder in Cleveland within two weeks of which women have been the victims.

Sims Urges Preparedness

NEWPORT, R. I., May 22 — Rear Admiral Wm. S. Sims, president of the naval war college, in an address before the graduating class of 1922, preached a strong sermon for preparedness. He charged the country has ever been unprepared in time of emergency and deplored the public indifference in the matter. "Such conditions can only result in lowering of morale," the admiral said.

IRISH LABOR PARTY MAY UPSET PLANS OF OTHER PARTIES

LONDON, May 22. — Bringing with him a draft of the new Irish constitution, Arthur Griffith, president of the Dail Eireann arrived here today from Dublin. He will consult with members of the British government regarding the document. Optimism over the attainment of peace in the Irish Free State has increased as the result of an agreement between the Free Staters and the Republicans to form a coalition cabinet. It is feared, however, that the tension will again develop when the political campaign gets in full swing. The Irish Labor party is the present big unknown quantity in the Irish political situation. Leaders of that party indicated that they would put a ticket in the field which might upset the coalition.

RUSSIANS SAY HAGUE MEET WILL BE ACT II OF GENOA COMEDY

MOSCOW, May 22. — Soviet officials expressed the opinion today that the United States would eventually agree to participate in the meeting at The Hague next month, when a commission will be appointed to investigate the Russian question and report recommendations. They based their belief upon the desire of big American business interests to secure oil concessions from Russia. Russians are not over-sanguine that the meeting in the Dutch capital will be an overwhelming success. One of them characterized them as the "second act of the same comedy that began at Genoa."

CAN A MAN KIDNAP HIS OWN WIFE?

Irvin L. Stair, of St. Paul, president of the Great Northern Grain Co., married the daughter of wealthy George P. Flannery, of St. Paul, in 1916. The Stairs, with unlimited money, were members of the highest society in the Twin Cities. Two months ago she sued for divorce, alleging cruelty. An injunction was granted restraining her husband from interfering with her. But Stair went to her home, she swore, while she was disrobed and, by pressing a pistol to her side, forced her into an auto and drove her to St. Cloud, Minn., where they spent the night. Next day, when he stopped at a gasoline station, she had him arrested. He was sentenced to sixty days in jail in Minneapolis, where he spent two weeks. Then he sued for a writ of habeas corpus which was denied, but he was freed on bond pending an appeal. Mrs. Stair went before the grand jury and sought to have him indicted for kidnapping, but his attorney alleges a man can't kidnap his own wife. The Supreme Court of Minnesota will decide.

the fact that we are master of our fate, with the privilege of choosing both our friends and our occupations, each bringing their risks. "No man is fit to win who doesn't go thru a struggle. Civilization is complicated and love is the only excuse for happiness; love is the only excuse for choosing a work that will bring you success," according to Rev. Saleste.

He said this is an age in which education is absolutely necessary and essential to both boys and girls, and while he admired the self made man or woman, urged those who could to continue with their studies. "The need of efficiency is more eminent in this century than ever before and you as young men and women must sharpen your axes for life, to prepare to live in this age." While life must be lived seriously, because there are broken hearts, trials, hardships and hard work to endure, Rev. Saleste advised that we make use of our smiles, which God has given us, because character is more often revealed in a smile.

"The boy or girl who studies is bigger, the one who is interested in his occupation succeeds, the one believing and trusting in God is bigger and his chances for success larger, while the virtuous girl is far superior to the one who sells her charms."

The speaker declared if asked to tell the greatest hindrances in the making of a man or woman, he would say, wealthy parents and conceit. "Thru the eyes of God you are weighed by what you are, and all have the opportunity to become useful and big. Rev. Saleste advised the study of biographies of famous lives in helping to develop mind and character. "Barnum failed in 14 occupations before he became a world famous circus leader. Goldsmith failed as a doctor, Moody failed as a shoemaker, and we all fail if we leave out the priceless ingredient," he continued. "Nothing may be left out of a character leaving it successful, much less leaving out faith in yourself and in God." Where there is no vision, people perish and he suggested the Bible as a solution to personal needs, a guidebook of life.

Rev. Saleste closed with the remarks, "personal nobility is the greatest calling and it is much harder to become a good man or woman than it is to be a good lawyer, doctor, or business man. In other words, life is what we make it."

At the conclusion of the sermon the Rev. Joseph A. Spear made a prayer, followed by a hymn with the congregation. The Rev. W. B. Winters pronounced the benediction.

WHITE'S CAFETERIA MOVES TUESDAY

Ben White's cafeteria at present located in the William M. McCoy building on Hickory-st, will be moved Tuesday into the Barnes hotel building on south Fifth-st. The cafeteria will occupy the same room that the Home restaurant occupied until several weeks ago.

Mr. White found it necessary to move the cafeteria into new quarters because of the lack of space in the present building. Mr. White is enjoying an ever increasing business.

White's self serve restaurant has been in the McCoy building for the past five years. While there, Mr. White had enjoyed an excellent business.

Frequent Cultivations Increase Crop Yields

Frequent stirring of the seed bed and early cultivations destroy the sprouted weed seeds and young weeds before they have formed a root system which renders them hard to eradicate. Shallow cultivations soon after each rain not only destroy the young weeds but conserve moisture by forming a loose surface soil which breaks capillarity and prevents the evaporation of moisture.

It is good practice to continue cultivations until the crop is large enough to smother out young weeds and prevent excessive evaporation by shading the ground.

Weeds are the outcasts of plant civilization. They are thieves, robbing the useful plant of the food, moisture, space, and sunlight necessary to its thrifty growth and maximum yield, and if permitted to ripen seeds, will multiply the labor necessary to keep the next crop clean. In combating weeds, "A stitch (lick) in time saves nine."

Prune Fruit Trees When Transplanted

Since young trees purchased from the nursery have a considerable portion of their root systems detached in digging from the nursery rows, "prune back the tops to balance the loss." The advice of the horticulturists of the Ohio Experiment Station.

They say the newly planted tree makes its initial growth from the reserve food materials stored in the plant, but soon it begins to draw on the root system for moisture. If the top has not been reduced the roots will not be able to supply sufficient moisture for all the leaves that are put out.

It is recommended to leave only 3 to 6 inches on a two-year old apple tree and to cut them back to 4 to 5 inches in length. A one-year old tree usually has no side branches, and hence the top is cut back to 24 or 30 inches at planting time. The young peach tree should have all its branches removed, leaving only a short stub. The four cherry may be pruned by thinning the branches to 5 or 8, without cutting off the terminals.

It is also recommended that cabbage, celery, tomatoes, and other garden plants have part of the leaves pinched off to match the loss of roots in transplanting.

He was arrested in a restaurant Sunday after numerous complaints of his reckless driving had reached police headquarters.

Kansas City To Have Automobile Speedway

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 22.—A $500,000 automobile speedway, the latest racing track between Indianapolis and the Pacific Coast, will attract the world's greatest auto drivers to this city before this Summer has passed.

A mile and a quarter board track which, it is predicted, will be the speediest in the country, will be the course around which the roaring motors will split the air at a clip of from 116 to 120 miles an hour.

Ground for the new speedway already has been broken. Contractors have been ordered to finish the track in sixty days. Opening races will be run in August.

The speedway will require 1,000, 100 feet of lumber. The wide super track, in order to accommodate the great speed of the cars, will be banked at an angle reaching forty-five degrees.

EUROPE TAKES LESS BEEF AND MORE PORK

Overseas Food Habits, Changed By War, Are Said To Influence Home Meat Prices

Changed food habits in Europe since the war appear greatly to have reduced the demand for American beef, but to have almost doubled the demand for American hog products. Economists of the agricultural extension service, the Ohio State University, who have been looking into the question of meat exports, gave this out today as their main finding.

Even England seems no longer to be a beef-eating country, in the old sense. Great Britain now imports from America barely a sixth the amount of fresh beef brot in before 1914. However, its purchases of American canned beef are getting back around the pre-war figure; a thing true of no other European country.

The total export of fresh beef to all countries averaged 30 million pounds a year between 1910 and 1914, but amounted to only a little over 10 million pounds in 1921, the report states. Canned beef exports to all countries showed reduction from 9 million to 6 million pounds, on the same basis of comparison.

On the other hand, lard exports have jumped from an annual average of 474 million pounds, 1910-1914, to $869 million pounds, 1921. The export of hams has almost doubled, and bacon exports have more than doubled over the same period.

This helps explain why beef is selling in this country at 7 per cent less than it did before the war, while hog prices range 21 per cent above pre-war levels, the economists believe.

CHURCH FAVORS BLUE LAWS

DES MOINS, IA, May 22—Sunday golf, movies, and baseball were attacked in the general assembly of the Presbyterian church here today.

Rev. Harv L. Bowlby, secretary of the permanent committee on Sabbath observance, began the battle by a demand that the assembly go on record as strongly opposed to the so-called "European Sunday." He asked the assembly to pass resolutions demanding enforcement of the "blue laws." It is expected that these resolutions will be passed late today.

Socialists To Hold Demonstrations At Hague Conference

LONDON, May 22—As a protest against the outcome to the Genoa conference, British, French and Belgian socialists plan to hold demonstrations at The Hague, coincident with the opening of the conferences on Russia there in June, according to dispatches received today from Brussels.

Case Settled With Fists

BUBLIN, May 22—The solemn dignity of a Sinn Fein court at Mullinger was broken when the defendant and plaintiff decided to settle their troubles personally "with their dukes." During the excitement that followed, the judges decided that their dignity could be preserved elsewhere. It is reported that they made good time out of the courtroom.

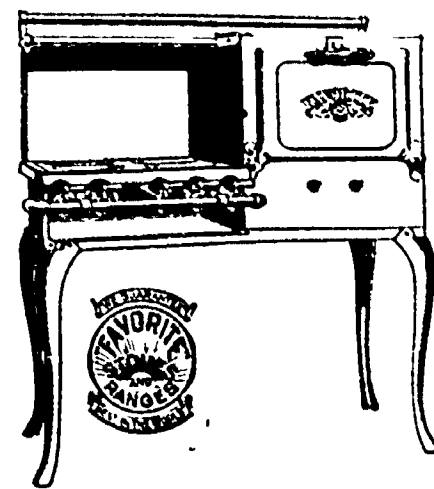

Castle Is Burned

BELEFAST, May 22—A group of Sinn Feiners early today crossed from Tyrone and attacked Shanes Castle, the ancestral home of Lord O'Neill at Antrim.

Villagers rushed to the rescue of the besieged garrison and both Lord and Lady O'Neill were rescued. The castle was gutted by fire.

FURTHER TROUBLES EXPECTED IN EGYPT

Undercurrent Of Opposition To The Present Regime Is Obvious

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, May 22.—Despite apparent calm in Egypt, due partially to restrictions upon the press and public oration, there is an undercurrent of opposition to the present government which may lead to further troubles.

In the provincial districts quiet has not prevailed as it has in Cairo and Alexandria. Recent attacks were made upon passenger trains returning from a royal reception. A special train upon which the newly appointed Governor of Oena was travelling was attacked by mobs in rural towns and made the object of a hail of earthenware pots and vessels.

The decision of the government to appoint a commission to frame the new constitution is largely responsible for the dissatisfaction which is growing. The people are anxious that they shall have an opportunity to express their voice in the framing of the constitution and are demanding that popular elections be held which will draft the constitution.

Another cause of dissension is the fact that the government has decided to reduce the salaries and emoluments of small office holders. These officials declare that the cost of living is still 100 per cent above pre-war costs and therefore that any salary reduction at this time is unjust.

Still another cause of dissatisfaction is the failure of the government to reach an amicable agreement with landowners on the price of lands which are to be taken over by the government.

TURKEY IS DRAWING NEAR AN AGREEMENT WITH THE GERMANS

GENOA, May 22.—A new alignment of the powers by which Turkey will be drawn into an alliance with Germany and Russia was seen here today in the wake of the economic conference. Observers said they believed that as a result of the French policy, Great Britain and Italy would be drawn closer together. Consequently the new groups in Europe will be drawn tentatively as follows: 1.—France, Belgium and Holland. 2.—Great Britain and Italy with a continuance of the French entente. 3.—Germany, Russia and Turkey.

GENOA, May 22.—Do you remember the story in the bible of satan taking Christ up on top of a mountain and offering him the riches of the world "If he would do satan's bidding?" George Titcher, secretary of foreign affairs for Russia, queried in an interview with an International News Service correspondent. Soviet Russia has stood on the mountain at Genoa and has been offered all she desires if only she will surrender the fundamental principles on which her state has been constructed—amid death, pain, and suffering," he continued.

"We do not mean to compare ourselves with Christ, for the price with the devil but the same principle of temptation we spurned," he added with slight shrug of the shoulders.

STATE SHOVS LEADER IN LIVESTOCK EFFORT

For the second quarter in succession Ohio has made the greatest progress of any State in the national Better-Sires, Better-Stock campaign, and is now ahead of Nebraska and almost even with Virginia, the leader.

A total of 1,433 Ohio farmers have signed the pledge to keep on their farms in the future nothing except purebred male livestock, bird and beast. Virginia reports 1,589 such "scrub-free" farms. Workers of the State Agricultural Extension Service who are conducting the work in Ohio predict that this State will have gained the lead by the next quarter, beginning July 1.

Shoe Workers Take Cut

LYNN, MASS., May 22.—Settlement of the industrial dispute between thirty thousand shoe workers and factory owners was seen today in the acceptance by 25,000 members of the United Shoe Workers of America of the temporary 15 per cent wage cut and five and a half day week proposed by the adjustment committee appointed by Mayor H. H. McPhetres.

Horse Thieves Return

DENVER, May 22.—The old "horse thief of the West" must be returning. In one twenty-four-hour period in Denver last week six reports of the theft of horses were made to police headquarters. Not one automobile was reported stolen during the same period.

DAUGHERTY DRAWS HOT PANNING FOR ALLEGED CONTRACT

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Hitting back at the administration in spectacular fashion, Senator Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas, succeeded in arousing a first class political flurry in the capital Saturday night by the production of purported proof that Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty was instrumental in securing the release of Charles W. Morse from federal prison in 1913 for an agreed-upon fee of $25,000.

The Democratic attack upon Attorney General Daugherty was renewed in the senate today when Senator Caraway, Democrat of Arkansas, read what he said was a "photostatic copy" of a contract between Daugherty and Charles W. Morse, New York financier and shipbuilder, under which Daugherty was to be paid $25,000 for obtaining Morse's release from the Atlanta penitentiary. The alleged contract was dated August 4, 1911.

Republican senators who previously had defended the attorney general against Caraway's attacks sat in dead silence as Caraway read the purported contract. Caraway also read a letter alleged to have been written by Daugherty to Morse complaining that the $25,000 had not been paid. Caraway demanded that Daugherty "resign his office" to save the administration "from further embarrassment."

Caraway, in opening his attack on Daugherty, stressed the attorney general's attitude of friendship with Thomas H. Felder, former Georgia pardon attorney. Caraway denounced Felder whom senator Watson, Democrat of Georgia, called a "cheap crook" during a previous debate.

Wants Greater Army

CHARLOTTE, N. C., May 22.—Expressing wonderment that United States was able actually to win victory in the World War considering her unpreparedness, Gen. John J. Pershing, today voiced an appeal for a sufficient standing army to protect the nation in the future.

Gen. Pershing made his statement here in the course of an address at the celebration of the 147th anniversary of the signing of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence.

Good Blood—Good Health

Are you what you eat, and want, but comparatively few have. If you are tired and weak in the morning, have no appetite, have indigestion or dyspepsia, sleeplessness, scrofula sores, blood humors, pains of rheumatism, disagreeable catarrh in the head, your blood is not good.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is the medicine to make good blood and good health. It contains great curative virtue and promptly gives nerve, muscular and digestive strength. The small dose, three times a day, and the positive results, absolutely prove its merit. The reduction in price and the removal of the stam tax make it by far the most economical of all family medicines. Get a bottle today.

A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.

GOOD-MORNING, Mrs. Trout," said Mrs. Yellow Perch, as she saw the stranger silently swim into the old mill-pond. "I'm certainly glad to see you."

"You're not nearly so glad to see me as I am to be here," replied Mrs. Trout. "It has been a long, hard swim down from the mountain, and I thought I'd never get this far."

"Such a trip may be all right for the one who likes to travel," laughed Mrs. Trout. "But I guess I'm lazy. I'd for I never like to travel myself. Did you really enjoy the trip?"

"Not very much," replied Mrs. Trout. "Why, I kept me busy dodging the fishermen. I never saw them so thick along the stream. I would just begin to think I was safe when up would pop a fisherman, and then I'd either have to hide or swim for my life."

"I've found it a pretty good plan to stay away from the shore when I see folks fishing," said Mrs. Yellow Perch. "If you don't get too close to the shore and their lines they are not apt to see you. That shows very plainly you've never seen any one trout fishing. Why they wear big rubber boots and wade right down the center of the stream, and they cast their flies on the water in such a clever natural way. I don't think the flies aren't real until you're caught. But, goodness me, I must hurry or I'll never find a nesting place."

"Why not come along with me?" invited Mrs. Yellow Perch. "There are plenty of lovely coveys along the bank, and I'll share them with you gladly."

"Why, my dear, I don't eat coveys," laughed Mrs. Trout. "Thanks just the same. I'll never do that."

"Eat them," laughed Mrs. Trout. "Eat them," said Mrs. Trout. "Excuse me for laughing, but that sounded so funny! I don't eat them, either."

"Then why did you suggest sharing them with me?" asked Mrs. Trout. "For nesting places," laughed Mrs. Trout. "If you don't hang your eggs on weeds at the edge of the stream, I'll never find them."

"I lay my eggs where every good trout lays hers—on the very bottom of the stream."

"Not me!" replied Mrs. Trout. "I put my eggs among the coveys at this time of the year—that grow along the edge of the stream. Just below the mill-pond is a lovely place—plenty of coveys are there."

MARY BROOKS PICKEN

HAT to wear and when? The suitability of a costume to the occasion it will grace is of importance to women as the style and beauty of the gown itself. Mary Brooks Picken, vice-president of the Women's Institute of Domestic Arts and Sciences, in her book "The Secrets of Distinctive Dress," offers an illuminating guide to correct spring dressing in the above chart.

Mrs. Picken considers clothes a subject worthy of the most serious thought of women who take pride in living up to their best. "Dress is all important," she says, "because it portrays character. To appear at your very best at all times, you must give due regard to appropriateness, comfort, grace and harmony."

Concerning spring style tendencies Mrs. Picken stresses the growing popularity of "Use discriminating as much color as you can, both in dresses and suits," she says, and cites the new three-piece suit, a special spring feature, as offering unusual opportunity for using bright hued material.

"Pretty sleeves were never so much in vogue as now," is another hint, and then paradoxically, "this is also the day of the sleeveless dress, a twentieth century adaptation of the graceful lines and simplicity of the ancient Greek robes. Your dress this year will either have no sleeves at all, or the sleeves will be its most conspicuous feature."

To those who make their own clothes, Mrs. Picken adds a valuable suggestion that dresses, especially when of silk, be self-trimmed. "You will find that a one-colored silk dress is appropriate for many occasions, and is a real economy and satisfaction to the woman whose wardrobe is limited. It is not always possible to secure self-trimmed gowns except at the best shops, but skillful home-dressmakers will find they offer great possibilities."

Y. W. C. A. NEWS

Miss Lois Diehl, Field Secretary, of Cincinnati, will arrive Tuesday to be with our local association for a few days.

Miss Diehl, as you will remember, was with us during our membership campaign and I am sure she will be pleased to meet you all again. Drop in at the rooms and see her.

Of course every girl is thoroughly interested in our summer camp. Everything is coming along fine with it excepting the name. As yet we haven't given our camp a suitable name, so we are leaving that up to the girls. There will be a bulletin posted in the rooms and we are urging every girl to drop in and offer her suggestions. A committee will decide from this list. Start your brain working, girls, and think up some real clever names for our camp.

SOUTH AMERICAN GIRLS CHAPERONED EVEN TO THE MOVIES

Can't Go Out Without Mothers, Writes American Visitor

Amusements for girls are few and far between in South America. "You just cannot imagine life with none of the recreations to which you are accustomed at home, writes Miss Helen Kennedy Stevens from Buenos Aires. "The movies are the only form of public amusement and no senorita of any family can go without her mother. Young, unmarried women simply never go out of the house alone. The fun we have at home at parties and going out in mixed parties is absolutely unknown here."

If anyone questions the value of the Young Women's Christian Association in South America, continue Miss Stevens, one should see the bareness of the fives of the average Argentine girl and the necessity to have something with which to fill her time. "The public has been slow to realize the importance of giving girls opportunities to learn to become better wives and mothers," she writes. "Things are far from easy because at every step you have to combat popular public opinion which holds no place for women and their mental and physical development. Many South Americans are intense individualists. My sister's little maid, for instance, sweeps out all the dust from my room on to all the balcony. It matters not at all to her that the people below are sitting on the top of their heads as they labor with their hands are in one class and so in the store a saleswoman will not think of wrapping up a package for you."

To help South American girls develop into better educated and helpful wives and mothers, the Association operates centers, camps and classes. The Y. W. C. A. camp near Buenos Aires is the first girls' camp in Argentina. Among the prominent speakers at its forums recently has been the head of the Observatory of the University of La Plata and the editor of the leading paper in Buenos Aires.

Why the steamship Dee which was only nine miles from the Egypt, when that ill-fated liner went down failed to respond to "S. O. S." calls. An official revised estimate today of the casualties in the sinking of The Peninsular & Oriental liner Egypt off the French coast: put the dead at 98. All are believed to have been either English or native seamen.

The Egypt was in collision with the French freighter Zine in a thick fog.

Two hundred and thirty survivors, have been landed there. Vessels are patrolling the scene of the disaster in hope of making further rescues and to pick up corpses. Twenty two bodies had been recovered up to the time this dispatch was filed. The Egypt sailed for Bombay from London on Friday, carrying 44 passengers and a crew of 291. Captain Barzic of the Zine said that the fog was so dense that it was absolutely impossible to receive any warning of danger.

"There have been few times when I ever saw such thick weather," said the captain. "I was on the look-out listening for fog horns. Our speed had been reduced to five knots. Suddenly there was an enormous mass ahead of us. My bows went clean thru it's side. The two ships separated and after twenty minutes I found the other vessel on her port side. She had turned turtle. I ordered all my boats launched and life belts were thrown into the sea. We remained until nearly midnight picking up 29 passengers and about 200 members of the crew, also we found four bodies." Survivors told thrilling stories of the tragedy with the water filled with struggling figures whose cries could be heard through the fog, pleading to be saved. The rescue work was guided by the pitiful shouts of the men and women in the water. It was too foggy and dark to direct the work too foggy.

According to a representative of The Peninsular & Oriental line Miss M. V. Boyer and Mrs. M. L. Sibley, American missionaries are missing. Robert Bevan and another American passenger were reported rescued.

More, Bevan is a resident of Baltimore, Md.

Bevan said he was just dressing for a late dinner when the crash occurred. "I was just putting on my dinner coat and went when there was a terrific jolt," said he. "It threw me against the stateroom wall. I immediately put on my overcoat and ran up on the deck to see what had happened."

"It was a frightful scene" the American survivor told the International News Service. "Panic stricken passengers screaming at the top of their voices, rushed up and down the decks. Some threw themselves on their faces and prayed. Others ran aimlessly back and forth. They jumped into me in the darkness time and again.

"The Lascars in the crew were the greatest cowards I ever saw. They crowded to the lifeboats fighting to get inside and pushing the women back. I saw that it was impossible to fight off the crew or to get a place in a lifeboat, so I got a life preserver and put it on and jumped overboard taking a chance in the fog and darkness. I narrowly missed landing on a pile of wreckage."

"The water was very calm, but cold. I paddled away from the Egypt with all my strength to avoid the suction when she went down. I felt certain the vessel was doomed," Bevan continued. "I could hear screaming from all parts of the water, but I could not see anyone. On several occasions I heard a roaring, rushing sound which I thought was the Egypt sinking. I remained in the water some time."

"I shouted and I was picked up. It was from the Zine. I was on my way to Malaga, Spain. I am not sure but I do believe there were no other Americans on board. The passenger list was not a bad one. I am going to continue my journey to Spain but I am going on a railway train."

Despite Mr. Bevan's statement that he believed there were no other Americans on board, a was reliably reported that among the missing persons are two American missionaries, one Baptist and one Lutheran.

Oregon Spends Huge Sum In Road Building

SALEM, Ore., May 22.—Before this year shall have passed more than $50,000,000 will have been spent in carrying out the State highway program which was adopted in 1917.

In paying and macadamizing 3,721 miles of highways since 1917 the State of Oregon claims a record unequalled by any other commonwealth. During that time the State has expended $35,125,000 on its roads, the counties have spent $8,133,976 and the Government $6,589,978. Contracts which have been let and which will be completed this year will swell the total beyond the fifty million mark.

Autos Valued At Huge Sums Stolen In Georgia

ATLANTA, May 22.—Two thousand automobiles, whose aggregate value reached $2,000,000, were stolen in Georgia during 1921, according to reports compiled by the Automobile Underwriters' Detective Bureau.

Between 65 and 70 per cent of the cars were recovered, R. C. Patterson, secretary of the bureau, states, but repairs on each of the recovered machines averaged $150. This, together with the value of the 10 to 15 per cent unrecovered, represents a loss of approximately $900,000.

Legislation requiring recording of the title of each car sold, as in the case of real estate, and requiring each driver to carry a registration card for the car he is driving, with his photograph, and the numbers of the car and motor thereon, would, he believes, materially reduce automobile thefts.

Find Truckloads Booze

NEW YORK, May 22.—Daniel Cella and Leon Brati, New York truck drivers, were locked up in the second precinct station, Jersey City, as a result of being detected today in the act of driving two trucks loaded with whiskey, worth $75,000, from New Jersey into New York City. The men claimed they were hired to do the hauling.

CAMBRIDGE WINS FAST GAME HERE IN FINAL INNING

Visiting Pitcher Tightens Up And Is Invulnerable After First Frame

SHORTSTOP IS STAR

Holding the Coshocton Regulars scoreless after the first inning with two runs, the visitors tied the score in the eighth inning, went two ahead in their half of the ninth and consequently the locals were defeated by the Cambridge-Byesville nine by a score of 4 to 2 at Red Sea Sunday afternoon.

The Regulars' two scores came in the first inning on Leo Unger's terrific smash for a two bagger. Robinson and Hendry were on bases at the time and scored. The Regulars went scoreless for the eight remaining innings.

The Cambridgemen made one run in their half of the second inning. The game was airtight after that until the eighth, when the railroaders came thru with another tally and tied the score.

The Duke of York, second son of the King of England, is one of the leading tennis players of the British Isles and is here shown playing a doubles match on the courts at Southampton, England, teamed with Commander Greig, R. N.

Robertson let the locals down with four scattered hits, while DeChambeau allowed the visitors seven safeties. Both hurlers had good support. Hendry, 3b, for the locals had one costly error on third sack. He let one go thru him that advanced a man.

safety to first base.

H. Lenham, the red haired shortstop of the Cambridge outfit, was the individual star of yesterday's game in fielding. The shortstop is a fast feller and made several nice plays in yesterday's tangle. He's a good batter also. He won the game on his sharp single that sent two runners across the pan. Kirby Laird at second base and Robinson at short played their respective positions in good style. The Regulars pepped things up when Catcher McClusky from Newark was sent behind the bat to relieve Brown. McClusky stimulated his teammates by "talking it up." Brown caught a good game, but his peg to the bases was a little off.

The breaks in yesterday's game favored the visitors. Most all of the Cambridge team's putouts were made without much effort, while the locals did not come that way.

A big crowd witnessed Sunday's game. The seating capacity was overtaxed.

The Regulars play the Massillon Agathons on Thursday evening at Red Sea park. The game begins at 5:30 o'clock.

"Pro" Chief Also Is Long-Distance Talker

WASHINGTON, May 22.—They now have added the name of Roy A. Haynes, Prohibition Commissioner, to the world's list of long-distance talkers.

Haynes has interspersed a whirlwind programme for drying up the country with about 200,000 miles of travel and more than 100 speeches since he took office less than a year ago.

The "Ohio oracle" as his Middle Western neighbors call him, speaks usually without manuscript, and whizzes along, after a swift start, at the rate of 150 words a minute. He is noted for jamming big ideas into long sentences. A two-hour speech is just one of the passing incidents of the day for the prohibition chief. He boasts it matters not whether the audience is with him or against him in his views once he gets a full head of steam and rips loose for a torrent of words.

COACH BUCHER HAS SUCCESSFUL SEASON AT COSHOCTON HIGH

The Coshocton high school Saturday closed a successful season in sports and athletics.

Coach Lester Bucher closed the 1922 baseball season in the high school with three wins, two losses and one tie game. The wins were over Tyndal, Newcomerstown and the Agricultural team at the local high school. The team lost two games with West Lafayette and tied one with Cambridge.

Paul Thornesley has been elected captain of the 1923 high school baseball team. Bucher loses two senior baseball players thru graduation this year. The two are Senter and Bowen.

Outside of this change the team will remain the same next year.

Bucher plans to place a strong basketball squad on the floor this season. He has five lettered men who will have berths on the 1923 squad.

Four lettered men will be back this season for the 1923 football team. The coach has excellent material for the 1923 football squad. He is planning on building up a strong aggregation. The football schedule of the season has been completed. The season opens several days later this year for the local high. The scheduled games in all this year number seven. According to schedule the local team plays as follows: C. H. S. at Zanesville high school, October 14; C. H. S. at Uhrichsville, October 21; Ohio State School for the Deaf and Dumb at Coshocton, October 28; Millersburg at Coshocton, November 1; C. H. S. at Martins Ferry, Armistice Day, November 11; Doane Academy at Coshocton, November 18; Open date, November 25 and C. H. S. vs. Alumni at Red Sea, November 30.

Coach Buker will take his football squad to see the Ohio Wesleyan-Ohio State game on October 7, a week before the locals open their season. The purpose of seeing the game is to get some pointers out of the contest.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

The Mission on Which Lillian Sent Tom Chester.

UNDER Tom Chester's tense fingers the lining of Smith's eyeglass case pulled away from the outer covering, giving Lillian and me a flashing glimpse of white, then as he lifted his hand, the lining snapped back into place, giving absolutely no indication that it could be loosened.

Lillian put out her hand, and the young man laid the case in it. She scrutinized it closely, and handed it to me.

"It's cleverly constructed," she said, "made specially to order, of course. Give it the once over and see if you can detect the joining."

In my turn I examined the beautifully fashioned thing, and shook my head in defeat.

Tom Chester's Discovery.

"How did you discover it?" Lillian looked at young Mr. Chester with a little touch of admiring deference in her manner which made me bite my lips to keep back a smile. That she, with her experience, had known from the first glimpse of the eyeglass case that it hid something I was sure, but for some reason she wished Tom Chester to think the discovery all his own.

"Why?" he stammered boyishly. "It seemed such a queer thing for him to carry when he was climbing up a rope ladder and over a roof, that I figured it meant something. And I remembered—please don't laugh—something I saw in a movie once and thought I'd try to pull the lining a bit. And when it came away, I saw these pieces of queer white paper."

I anticipated Lillian's outstretched hand, gave her back the case, and watched her tensely, as she pulled away the lining as far as it would go, and took out a packet of white papers, so apparently gauzy in texture that it seemed as though the slightest touch would tear them, yet evidently as indestructible as parchment.

"Ah-h!" The exclamation was but a breath, yet I knew that suddenly the importance of the thing Tom Chester had found had been enhanced in her eyes. She took the extreme corner of one of the thin sheets between her thumb and forefinger, felt of it, then raised the packet to her nose and sniffed experimentally.

"Invisible Ink?"

"You found something, my lad, when you pulled that lining away," she said emphatically, and young Mr. Chester flushed to the roots of his hair with pleasure.

"I'm practically certain of it," Lillian replied, "unless the gifted Mr. Smith has a patent cigarette paper, the secret of which he doesn't want to share with anybody. But we can't tell for certain until Allen Drake gets here. There's no use in experimenting with the thing twice, and if my guess is right, Allen will have to handle the thing anyway."

She put the papers carefully back in the case, pushed the lining into place, replaced the eyeglasses and closed the case with an air of finality that told me she wished no further comment or discussion of the incident until she herself should reopen it.

Solving Some of the Problems of "Setting Off" Your Beauty

By LUCREZIA BORI The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

LUCREZIA BORI

Reading a French novel recently, I became deeply engrossed in the life story of the heroine. It was a sort of butterfly transition, the history of her different periods of progression from the ugly caterpillar through the chrysalis stage to the beautiful butterfly stage.

This person was not a raving beauty in feature, but was passably fair and very clever. For any woman is clever who realizes the extent of her possibilities and sets about to better her condition by all fair means within her reach.

Apply this to yourself. In this progressive age, every woman has within her reach divers means of caring for her personal looks and enhancing her beauty.

There are the necessary creams and lotions which are inexpensive enough to be within the reach of all. There are dozens of books which treat health and beauty culture in a scientific way, and simply enough to be understood and practiced by any of us.

There is almost always a swimming pool or gymnasium to which we have easy access, and which is invaluable in gaining and keeping a beautiful figure. The Frenchwoman in the novel went in for more subtle means of enhancing her charm. She knew that she appeared more beautiful by candle light, and she managed to use candles when ever possible. She liked perfume, and considered that it added to her personality and charm, and she had her favorite brand, which she used very sparingly I imagine. There are helpful hints

THE HANDICAP

By Juanita Hamel

IN that critical instant when the last stroke will lose or win for him—just at the moment when success absolutely depends upon keeping his eyes fixed on the ball—THEY appear.

What greater handicap could he have than to be torn between duty and beauty, especially when one, by administering that just-right touch, shows SHE is conscious that HE is near?

"With your permission, Mr. Chester," she said perfunctorily. "I'll keep this now for the next thing. Do you think Smith lamed himself to any extent when he fell from the rope ladder? You spoke of his groaning."

"I don't believe he'll be able to take a step tomorrow," Mr. Chester replied. "It wasn't a break, or he wouldn't have been able to get home at all, although I imagine he's a pretty gritty proposition. But I imagine he has a severe sprain."

"Of course, he won't have a doctor tonight," Lillian mused. "But in the morning, he'll no doubt ask Mr. Briggs which is the best physician. Do you know whether or not Dr. Pettit attends the Briggs family?"

"I don't know," I returned, and Tom Chester shook his head.

Lillian considered a minute, looking into space.

"I think it's time I had an interview with Mr. Briggs," she said. "From what I hear, he's a very able citizen, and will no doubt be able to keep his mouth shut, a rare accomplishment these days. But I must keep close tab on Smith. Mr. Chester, can you manage to see Briggs as early in the morning as he arises?"

She paused, and the young man answered her with a smile.

"That will be about five o'clock," he said, but if he expected Lillian to be astonished he must have been disappointed.

"Five?" she exclaimed. "That will be just what I want. So you'd better run along home now, snatch what sleep you can and make it up tomorrow. Just ask Mr. Briggs to come over here as soon as he can without Smith knowing where he has gone. Just hint to him that it is government work."

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT Mary and a Home

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

WELL, Mary, Mary, you certainly started something interesting when you wrote and said you wished you could see a man sometime who really cared for a real girl, and didn't want to spend all his time running around after little painted powder-puffs with picked eyebrows and rouged lips and not an idea in their heads or a sentiment in their hearts.

You like to dance you said—sometimes—not all the time.

You like the theatre—once in a while—not every night.

You are fond of books and you like children and you like to cook and you wish you could think that some day you were going to have a nice comfy little home of your own that you could take care of yourself and make cozy and happy for the man you love and the man who would love you.

Love you, not for some silly little "vampish trick," not because you were a "swell dresser," not because you were there with the "come-back," but because you are real and honest, and true and loyal and dependable.

Wistful Letters

If that letter of yours has been answered by one man, it has been answered by a thousand. From all over the country they come, the letters.

From cowboys, riding the lonely range in the starlight and wishing they knew you, Mary, Mary, or somebody like you.

From miners, in little mountain towns, from farmers, in the middle west, from shoe clerks in New England, from traveling men in Minnesota, from railroad men in California, from stock men in Texas.

From old men who have been married happily and want to try it again—from middle-aged men who have been married unhappily and would like to take another chance—from young men who've never been married at all and who say that they don't even dare to think of marriage when they look at the average girl. Some of the letters are well-written and correctly spelled, some are from men who are uneducated, some are from poor men and some—yes, quite a few of them—are from men who are more than usually well-to-do, and these last are the most wistful of all.

And they are all tired of the little powder-puff type. They are afraid of her and they don't trust her, she is always after something, always looking for money, or a new bracelet, or a party, or a motor ride, or something, anything at all, so she can coax and hint and bully it out of some man, somehow—no matter who he is.

Don't Be Discouraged

And they all want to meet some simple, straightforward, real girl, who'll help them to start out in life and make a real home for them and for—yes, they all want somebody else, too—every one of them—some want a boy and some want a girl, but they all want children and a home.

And Mary, Mary, if you never did anything else in your life, you've given hope and encouragement to a lot of poor, lonesome, discouraged disillusioned men who have been "worked" and fooled and exploited until they were almost ready to believe that there isn't a decent, unselfish, real woman left in the world.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl still in my "teens." I have a young man friend who says he loves me.

My parents like him very much, and want me to go with him. But still I don't love him as I should. There is another young man who also says he loves me.

My parents do not like him very well, and yet I love him more dearly than the first.

How can I persuade my parents to let me go with him? Also, how can I learn to love this young man whom my parents like?

IN DOUBT: Have an affectionate talk with your mother, and ask her if you cannot have the young man for a friend if he is a proper companion for you.

You are young and not engaged, so it would be well for you to have both of the young men for friends, my dear. You might learn to be fond of the other young man, but you cannot love two men at once. If you are truly in love with the first, I do not see how you could fall in love with the second.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a married woman, 30 years of age. I love my husband, but he doesn't seem to love me. I think he must love another girl. Please tell me what to do.

BEAUTY: Have faith and trust in your husband, my dear, and do not allow suspicion and jealousy to creep into your mind. Be as attractive and sweet as you know how, and, above all things, don't nag your husband and tell him that he seems cold. Remember he works very hard to support you, and may be tired when he comes home in the evening.

Make his home so attractive that he cannot have a thought of anything other than you. You see, after all, my dear, in large measure, it is "up to you."

Don't you be discouraged, Mary, Mary—keep right on exactly the way you are and the right sort of man will find you, just as sure as life is life! And when he does, you'll be mighty glad that you haven't wasted a whole lot of your time on the wrong sort.

As for you, John, are you quite sure that there is nothing in the way you act that makes Mary, Mary, and the rest of the girls like her think that you don't really care for anything but empty-headed vanity and silly affectation? Don't you pay a good deal of attention now and then to the little powder-puffs and leave Mary, Mary alone—to think it over?

If you do, you can't blame her for being discouraged—can you?

Five Recipes for Unusually Good Fish Salads.

FISH salads are becoming very popular for summer service, and if they are properly made with appropriate sauces they are delicious. Where fresh fish is used it should be boiled and drained, have the skin and bones removed, and then be flaked. If the fish must stand a little while after it is prepared, cover it closely and set it in a cold place to keep the edges from drying out, or put a damp cloth over the top, then set in a cold place.

When canned fish is used, drain, remove skin and bone, flake and put away as directed until ready for use. When fish roe is used, parboil it in a very rich bouillon or salted, acidulated water for a half-hour, cool, dice and make the salad. A fish salad should be cold, but not chilled. Cold boiled eggs, sweet herbs, different varieties of lettuce, mint, onions, garlic, celery, watercress, mint leaves, red peppers, olives, cucumbers, pickles and lemons are all adjuncts of the fish salad.

Wipe the salad-bowl well with a cut bud of garlic. Flake enough fresh cod to make two cupfuls, add two cupfuls of diced potatoes, a grated onion and a cupful of hearts of celery, chopped. Put the yolks of two hard-boiled eggs through a ricer, and cut the whites in thin rings. Cut the heart of a small head of lettuce in ribbons with the kitchen scissors. Use a bacon sauce made of a scant half-cupful of clear bacon fat, a quarter-cupful of vinegar, a teaspoonful of sugar, red pepper and a teaspoonful of garlic vinegar. Toss the salad in the sauce and serve on white lettuce leaves with sprays of fresh cress as a garnish.

Sardine Salad. Open a large can of boneless sardines in oil, and drain, skin and flake the fish. Wipe the bowl with a bud of garlic. Add a cupful of finely-diced potatoes, two white onions sliced thin, then separated into rings, and a dozen olives pitted like apples from the stones, and with the curls spread lightly with anchovy paste. Add a tablespoonful of chopped, green celery leaves, and toss in heavy French dressing to moisten. Do not use too much dressing or the salad will get sloppy before it is served.

Shrimp and Cucumber Salad. Shell and leave in pieces a pint of cold boiled shrimp. Peel and cut in quarters a fresh cucumber, remove the seeds, then dice it very fine. Take the centres of two or three stalks of celery and chop fine with a few of the white leaves and a seeded red pepper. Mix the bowl with garlic and mix the salad, adding two big sweet pickles cut in tiny pieces. Use four tablespoonfuls of sharp French dressing, a red pepper and two teaspoonfuls of sugar. Add a half-cupful of mayonnaise made without mustard. Garnish with hard-boiled egg slices which have been dipped in French dressing.

Oyster Salad. Scald two dozen oysters in their own liquor for two minutes, or until the liquid cuts. Drain and put the oysters into a marinade made of vinegar, a half-cupful of garlic, an onion, three cloves, chopped celery leaves, a bay leaf and a red pepper. Let stand for an hour or more. When ready, take out the oysters and lay them on lettuce leaves, laid up the marinade, thicken it with a little cornstarch dissolved in a little water, add a lump of butter, beat smooth, strain into a cold bowl and chill quickly, then turn over the salad. Add a few washed capers and a tablespoonful of chopped pepper and celery leaves.

Halibut Salad. Peel and flake two good-sized halibut steaks and add to them a half cupful of chopped cucumbers, a quarter-cupful of chopped celery leaves and a tablespoonful of washed capers. Serve with an English sauce made as follows: Rub together the yolk of a fresh raw egg and two yolks of boiled eggs. When smooth add one teaspoonful of dry mustard, then work in slowly a half-cupful of salad oil, two tablespoonfuls of tartaric vinegar and one tablespoonful of lemon juice. Add salt, pepper and a teaspoonful of sugar, and when all is smooth add a half-cupful of whipped cream. Chill the sauce and mix at the last minute.

Horseradish sauce is good with fish salad, also, made in this way: Two tablespoonfuls of freshly-grated horseradish, one raw egg yolk, a half-cupful of oil, a teaspoonful of lemon juice and a teaspoonful of garlic vinegar, pepper and salt. Beat this mixture well, cool it and add it to the fish salad.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

TUESDAY, MAY 23. This promises to be a very lively and interesting day in business as well as in all lines of social, domestic and romantic activities. All are under splendid auguries for happy and prosperous conditions. There is a figure read as bringing much pleasure to the household, but another warns against strife and litigation. There may be a strong disposition to argument or controversy, which should be curbed.

Those whose birthday it is have the assurance of a lively and pleasant year in all their interests, but they should avoid quarrels and litigation. Also important changes should be avoided. A child born on this day will be clever, enterprising, kind and affectionate, but may be fond of argument and dispute unless carefully trained early in life. It will be successful in its undertakings.

YOUR HEALTH

How to Treat a Child After Whooping Cough or Measles

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D. Commissioner of Health, New York City

IN many cities, particularly in New York City, there were an unusual number of cases of measles during the past winter. There also were many cases of whooping cough. Neither of these diseases is regarded by the average parent as a condition of great importance.

I fear that we do not regard them in the serious way we ought, for we cannot consider any disease of little importance when hundreds of children die from it.

In New York City we look for seven hundred or eight hundred deaths each year from measles. Whooping cough takes a toll almost as great. Uncomplicated measles and whooping cough need not be worried about, but the trouble with both these diseases is that pneumonia may follow as a deadly complication. The point is that in every disease we should be on guard against what we call secondary infection.

The point I want to bring out particularly today is the importance of taking care of the child after he has had whooping cough or measles. It is vitally important that he should be guarded until every remnant of the disease has disappeared.

The catarrhal inflammation of the tissues lining his breathing apparatus produces a soil in which the germs of tuberculosis readily grow. The germs of the "white plague"—tuberculosis—has been called upon to be found everywhere. Tuberculosis germs cannot be avoided. They are of no consequence so long as you are healthy, and so long as your powers of resistance are normal. Illness of any sort weakens the body and so lowers its resistance that any secondary infection is bound to do harm.

I feel anxious particularly about the children who have had whooping cough during the past winter. That dreadful whoop which persists for so many, many weeks after recovery from the acute symptoms gives warning of the ailment the child has had. On this account, the poor little sufferer is ostracized by his companions, and is dreaded particularly by the parents of the neighborhood.

When the summer outings are planned, excursions arranged for and the picnics held, the whooping-cough child is not included. Therefore, the child who most needs out-of-door life is denied the privilege of participating in these good times with his playmates. The child who had measles or whooping cough last winter should be kept in the open air as much as possible until next fall.

He should be built up in body by being given milk in quantities and other nourishing food. When he begins to gain weight and to have rosy cheeks the danger subsides, and the prospect of complete recovery is most encouraging.

The future career of this child is at stake. If he is neglected after his immediate convalescence from measles or whooping cough he will become thin, will fail to develop physically and mentally, and will be hampered his whole life, because of neglect in this crisis.

Let us make it our business to see that every child who has had measles or whooping cough is given a chance for recuperation and such a building up of his body that he may grow to adult life with every prospect of years of usefulness.

Answers to Health Questions

W. H. Q.—Upon the least exertion my scalp perspires very freely, especially about the forehead. What would you advise me to do?

A.—You need have no cause for worry about this condition. It is not unusual. Nothing can be done to prevent this excessive perspiration.

MRS. F. B. S. Q.—Please tell me whether two eggs each day are harmful for a 15-months-old baby. I give the child one in the morning and one in the evening.

A.—It would be best to replace the egg at night with cereal and milk until the child is a little older.

MRS. B. Q.—What diet would you advise for high blood-pressure?

A.—Reduce your meat and egg intake. Give yourself plenty of sleep, gentle exercise and pleasant recreation.

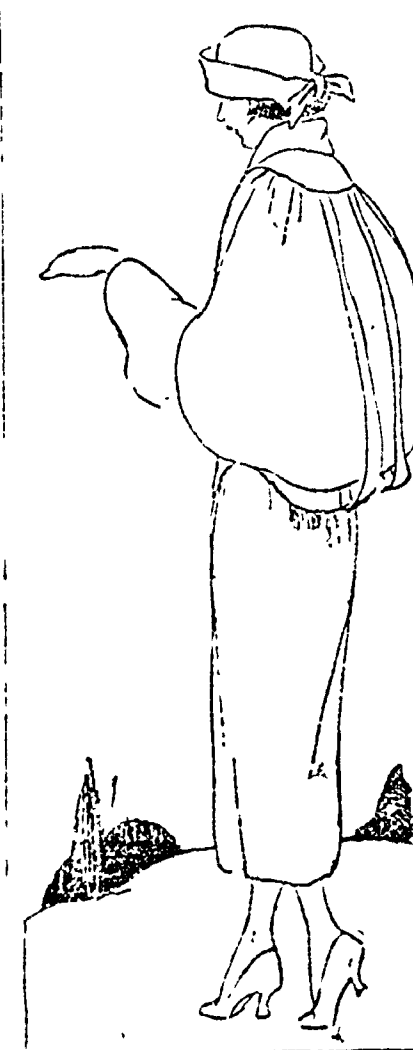

A. H. L. Q.—I am a young man 18 years old, and feel well and have a good appetite, but whenever I exert myself the least I become short of breath. Will you please tell me what to do for this?

A.—It is possible that you may have injured the muscles of your heart by over-exertion. Go to your family physician or to a hospital clinic for a physical examination and advice.

Today's Fashion

By VERA WINSTON

The Cape of This Smart Costume of Gray Kasha Has a Curved Yoke and Looped-up Straps.

THE three-piece costume continues to rule the season and each day some interesting interpretation is seen. Favor is divided between jackets and capes, and the outfit above assures one that capes are very smart.

Of kasha in the softest pearl gray, the dress shows a novel treatment in its very long waistline which curves down at the back. The little cape finds its unusuality in its curved yoke and looped-up straps.

Of cherry felt, the hat worn to offset the gray is extremely youthful in design. Its brim turns up from the face and extends into long ends which are tied into a saucy little bow at the back.

Financial Letter

NEW YORK, May 22—Steel merger prospects continue to be the predominant element of market interest. Sharp advances in various issues have followed upon announcements relating to the plans and prospects of combination. As often before stated, the question how far such mergers will result in a real basis for advance of prices depends largely upon the result of the agreements in cheapening costs of production or controlling prices themselves. It was probably a recognition of the latter fact that has led to the Congressional action of the subject, followed by adoption of a resolution calling for an inquiry.

Advance In Business

A better basis for confidence in steel shares than is afforded by the merger reports is seen in the increasingly encouraging reports from steel mills showing larger ingot production and new bookings. Better demand for copper and improved outlook in that industry generally are reflected in the resumption of dividends by one or two concerns, but are also seen in the lessening of surplus stocks and extension of operations. As a result, merger rumors are affloat in the copper market, just as in the steel market. In other branches of business there are some indications of the same tendency, although it is less pronounced. It is due essentially to the belief in prospects for better business and to the idea that more of effective capitalistic organization can succeed in taking advantage of this outlook. In the railroad field, the resumption of consolidation reports, based upon discussions before the Interstate Commerce Commission, represents a parallel situation. Meantime, the president's conference with railroad executives, set for the evening of the 20th, is looked forward to as possibly a turning point in the development of railroad share values.

Disappointment At Genoa

The closing sessions of the Genoa Conference have turned out to be even less encouraging than had been expected some time ago, and the chief reliance for greater success in the meetings at The Hague is now evidently upon action on the part of the United States, which, however, seems to be as remote as ever. Unofficial reports that the international conference is deferred or that the United States will not participate in it are apparently the result of indisposition in this country to map out as yet a definite programme for the extension of economic aid to European countries. Secretary Hoover's programme stated in his address before the Chamber of Commerce convention at Washington during the past week calls for the familiar restoration of sound political conditions and equalization of foreign budgets so often insisted upon, but adds the new item of a gold standard for Europe with gold loans or credits by the United States, although there is no definite plan for securing the latter. Progress at all events is being made in settling the general elements of the problem offered by European conditions at the present time, and in mapping out at least a tentative plan for dealing with

SO NERVOUS SHE WOULD ALMOST SCREAM ALOUD

Mrs. Frush Gives A Strong Story Of Her Sufferings. Declares That Tanlac Has Restored Her To Finest Health.

"Tanlac has proved to be the right medicine for me," said Mrs. Rae Frush, 128 Hamilton St., Toledo, Ohio. "About two years ago my stomach began bothering me and I got so I could scarcely eat anything without suffering the worst kind of indigestion. I had a stuffed up feeling and severe pains in my stomach and chest. I was so weak and nervous I couldn't even sweep a room without stopping to rest. The least noise, and sometimes the prattle of my baby, would get me so nervous I would almost scream out loud. Awful nausea and sick headache added to my troubles and I almost despaired of ever regaining my health."

"A nurse told me how fine Tanlac would be in my case and I tried it. I have been built up to where I can do all my housework, have a good appetite, my nerves are steady and in fact I enjoy the finest health. I am only too glad to tell others about this grand medicine."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

Improvement In Crop Outlook

Government crop reports are increasingly favorable as regards almost all classes of products, and a substantial yield is now forecast in most lines. The effect of this good outlook, coupled with the more liberal attitude on the part of the banks, is already seen in the improvement of retail and other trade conditions at principal business centers in the west, while the restoration of more satisfactory prices for all classes of farm products, practically without exception, has proceeded rapidly. Foreign reports have lately pointed to an unexpected improvement in demand for our cotton and wheat, and a good many bank credits covering the exportation of these items are being negotiated. Country banks are very steadily liquidating their obligations to the Federal Reserve system, and have rapidly cut down their borrowings from city banks, the latter being largely free of rediscount obligations for some months ago. All this accounts for the unusual abundance of funds and ease of money which have been prevalent in the market for some time past, and are quite as obvious today, even with the season well advanced, as they have been at any previous time.

Important Supreme Court Decisions

Important decisions have been handed down by the Supreme Court during the past week, as affecting the child labor law and the grain futures law. The same principle is involved in each, but its application in connection with grain futures is more interesting to the financial, just as the companion decision is more interesting to the industrial, elements in the community. The Court holds in both cases that Congress is exceeding its powers when it undertakes indirectly to regulate the acts of a citizen in transactions which are obviously intrastate in character. A similar test was applied in a recent stockyards and packers' decision, where it was held that no matter how desirable and beneficial a given legislative proposal might be, the decision regarding it was to be based, not upon its merits, but upon the question whether it was, after all, a constitutional exercise of the power of Congress. In the stock yards case, the exercise of the power of control was upheld because of the fact that the packing houses were held to be essentially channels of interstate trade. Future trading or the personnel conditions in factories are held in like manner not to be included within the power of Congress in such a connection. This series of decisions is not only important in its bearing upon trading at the present time, but also fundamentally significant from the broader economic standpoint.

ARMY OF POLICE SURROUND NEW YORK BURGLARS

Five hundred heavily-armed New York policemen surrounded an entire block bounded by Fifth-av., Broadway, Nineteenth and Twentieth sts., when "stool pigeons" warned them a $120,000 safe robbery was to be "pulled." After an all-night search and a revolver battle, in which scores of shots were fired, four yeggs were arrested, one wounded four times. The photo diagram shows how the men were captured in two different groups, after trying to flee down stairs and slide down elevator cables. Three of the men captured (top to bottom) were: Henri Van Gulk, Abraham Finkel and Lewis Rick.

Market Review and Outlook

The ease with which prices have responded to moderate buying during the past few days shows that there is little danger of more than temporary setbacks taking place. Steel merger prospects have, of course, been a predominant factor in the making of prices, but the market is not receiving its present impetus simply because several of the steel companies are to become members of one family. It is rather influenced by the idea that there are to be a number of important railroad and industrial consolidations in the future. Consolidation talk has always been a potent factor in putting prices up, and is no less so at the present time, but, after all, the market's mainstay is the trade expansion, now so much in evidence, and easy money which can be counted on for a long time to come. To be sure, some stocks may be advancing more rapidly than warranted at the present time, but, taken as a whole, the market is acting in an orderly manner, with an absence of the excessive speculation, which was such a pronounced feature last month.

BLIZZARD'S DEFENSE EXPECTS TO COMPLETE ITS CASE THIS WEEK

CHARLES TOWN, W. VA., May 22.—William Blizzard's treason trial swung into its fourth and probably final week today. Counsel defending the young mine union official, whom the state of West Virginia claims directed an armed insurrection against its sovereignty, were prepared to call on Brig. Gen. L. H. Bandholtz, of the United States army, to testify.

Philip Murray, vice president of the United States Mine Workers of America, is expected to either follow Bandholtz on the stand or to testify tomorrow. Murray accompanied federal troops which were sent into southern West Virginia to stop the armed march of miners last summer. The defense expects both of these witnesses will aid in establishing an alibi for Blizzard and prove his only connection with the armed invasion was in the role of peacemaker.

URGES DEMOCRATS TO ADOPT I. AND R. IN PLATFORM OF PARTY

COLUMBUS, May 22.—That Ohio Democrats in their next state platform urge extension of the initiative and referendum to national legislation is the suggestion made by former Attorney General T. S. Hogan, Columbus.

"Centralization of power at Washington must be arrested, otherwise our form of government will soon come to an end," said Hogan. "The initiative and referendum will be an important factor in arresting this onward and dangerous movement. There are active agencies to concentrate all authority at Washington and to cause the country to take steps which the majority do not desire."

"The 'I & R' has prevented much harmful legislation and has been a most powerful antidote to an unrighteous lobby because improper legislation can be undone."

"Thus the initiative the country will have an opportunity to get what it wants and thru the referendum it will have an opportunity to kill what it does not want. It will make the representatives of the people act responsive to the people's will."

"The people have to foot the bill in the way of taxes and they should be given the opportunity of expressing their approval or disapproval, in a direct way, of the laws under which they are to live," declared Attorney Hogan.

PARTY SPIRIT BLOCK TO HONEST TARIFF, SEN. NORRIS SAYS

WASHINGTON, May 22.—The insurgent movement among Republican senators against the McCumber tariff bill, led to an appeal today from Senator Norris, Republican, of Nebraska, for a tariff bill drafted on a non-partisan basis. Norris charged that partisanship was "one of the greatest evils in government" and should be discarded in the drafting of tariff legislation. His appeal was warmly seconded by Democratic leaders. Traditional senate policies of a century providing that "to the political victor belongs the tariff spoils" would be wiped out if administration leaders were to follow Norris' suggestion.

When a tariff bill is taken up in committee, the minority members are excluded and the party in control drafts the bill. The result always is an attempt by leaders to line up one party in favor of the bill and the other party in opposition.

"Legislators are moved more to get partisan advantage than to secure a fair and honest tariff bill. Such a course is injurious to good legislation. Best results in legislation can only be obtained when party spirit is abolished. The answer is that the tariff bills have always been made this way and it is impossible to make them any other way. If this doctrine had been applied during the growth of civilization we would still be barbarians," said Senator Norris.

WHITE HOUSE DOORS ARE CLOSED TO AMBASSADOR WHO FORGOT HIS PAPERS

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Dr. Otto Wiefeldt, the new German ambassador to the United States, has been in a most embarrassing position since his arrival in Washington.

He has been in the capital for more than a week now and has not yet been received by President Harding. This fact has caused a great deal of comment in diplomatic quarters. Today the terrible truth came out. Dr. Wiefeldt left Berlin so hastily that he forgot the letters of credence and he cannot be formally presented at the White House until he has them. The new ambassador discovered that he had forgotten his papers shortly before arriving in New York. He sent an urgent cable to Berlin to rush them post haste and they are now enroute to Washington, but until they arrive, Dr. Wiefeldt cannot meet President Harding.

The paradoxes presented in Washington's diplomatic set are many. Dr. Wiefeldt has a country to represent but has no papers. Boris Bakhmeteff, the Russian ambassador has the papers, but no country.

The Woman-Tamer

By CLARA DELAFIELD

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union

"That's Bill Jugson. That was his brother Tom you seed, him that runs the feed store. Nope, they don't speak. And yet there was a time when the Jugson Brothers were known as David and what was the other fellow's name?"

"Twenty years they'd lived together in the old homestead since old Mrs. Jugson died. She was a woman, she was. Beat up old Jugson every time he come home with a load, and was said to take the strap to Tom and Bill after they'd reached twenty-five. I guess it was old Mrs. Jugson that made the boys decide never to marry. Can you blame 'em?"

"No woman should ever come between them, they said, and there they lived, doing their own chores, two old crusty bachelors. Wouldn't have a woman on the place. One night Tom—him that runs the feed store—come home with a strange look in his eye. Bill pokes a squint at him and says, 'A woman put that there.'"

"Tom denied it for a long time, but at last the truth came out. He'd met Mrs. Johnson, the widow of the station agent, and it seemed to have been a case of love at first sight—least ways, on Mrs. Johnson's part. Tom, like a fool, had fell for her at the church social, which he still attended every year, because old Mrs. Jugson had lapped him for not going twenty years before.

"Next night Mrs. Johnson walks in at the door.

"This is my brother Bill," says Tom, uncomfortable like. "Pleased to meet you," says Mrs. Johnson. As for Bill, Jugson, he nearly swoons when he sees what's coming after Tom. Mrs. Johnson had a finger like a bag of beans, and red hair. She looked determined, but it was the red hair that finished Bill. He took a greater dislike to her than to any woman he'd ever seen.

"Why, you poor boys," says Mrs. Johnson, "do you live like this? You want a woman's hand around, straightening things out for you."

"Bill and me don't like things straight," says Tom timidly.

"It don't matter, it's good for you," says Mrs. Johnson, and puts in two hours raising Cain generally about the place. And when she was through, Bill couldn't find his pipe, and Tom only had one slipper.

"What'll I do about it, Bill?" asks Tom that night. "I won't get clear of her 'til she's married me. Help me, Bill!"

"Bill pondered. 'You don't deserve it, Tom,' he said, 'but I'll do what I can for you. When she comes in tomorrow night, to tidy up again, you hide in that there closet!'

"Sure enough, next night Mrs. Johnson was round to the house with a bundle. 'I've brought you boys some home-made cakes,' she says. 'Where's Tom?'

"Bill cackled. 'Tom's out,' he said. 'Fact is, I didn't like to mention it before, but Tom goes on a spree now and again. He's over to Lenthville, raising Cain in the saloons.' All this, of course, happened some years ago.

"Mrs. Johnson looks at him in a queer kind of way. 'He hasn't got any other vices, has he?' she asks.

"Bill thought a while, because he wasn't very quick. 'I dunno if you'd call gambling a vice,' he says. 'What I objects to is the way he treats women when his temper's up.'"

"How's that?" asks Mrs. Johnson quickly.

"Beats 'em," says Bill. "That's why we can't keep a woman about the place. He's like a fiend, Mrs. Johnson. But that ain't nothing to his language."

"I see I was mistook in him," Mrs. Johnson sighs, and doesn't stay very long. When she was gone, Tom pops out of the closet.

"Whadya mean by telling that pack of lies on me?" he roars to Bill. "Now you've run me away. Temper, have I? Language, eh? Well, you'll see a bit of both now."

"With that he lets fly with his fists. It was the first quarrel the brothers had ever had, and Bill, seeing now that Tom had really wanted the Widow Johnson, and had been pretending out of deceitfulness, warms up too. They were pretty evenly matched, and they went at it hammer and tongs for nearly half-an-hour. At last, when they were both worn out and both showed signs of wear and tear, the Widow Johnson walks in on 'em again.

"Bill opens the door. 'I had to come back,' she says. 'I was so worried about your poor, weak brother. Oughtn't you to go over to Lenthville and see if you can persuade him to leave that den of iniquity!'

"With that she spots Tom, standing sheepish in the parlor, and in a minute she takes in what's happened. She takes one step toward him, but Tom's too quick for her. He was out of the window in a twinkling. And the Widow Johnson faints in Bill Jugson's arms.

"It took him quite a while to get her out of it, and when she came out at last she went into hysterics, and Bill Jugson had to pet her and comfort her. And in the middle of that, who should come in but Sally, the widow's maid, who'd gone to look for her, and—

"Well, as I said, the brothers Jugson don't speak any more. Tom went into the chicken-feed business soon after, and Bill's got a snug little hen-penalty of his own. I reckon. That's his wife, calling him. Bill's spy for an old one, ain't he?"

NEW CHEMICAL NO GOOD FOR APPLES
Paradichlorobenzene Which Gases Peach Borers, Said To Injure Apple Orchards

Paradichlorobenzene, the chemical successfully used last year by many Ohio farmers to gas peach tree borers, can not be used against the apple tree borer which is now making trouble in various parts of the State, according to entomologists of the Ohio State University.

"Apple trees are too seriously damaged by the paradichlorobenzene when used as on the peach tree," says T. H. Parks, extension specialist in this work. "Apple borers must be cut out with a sharp knife, and the injured trees must be fertilized back into vigor."

Prof. Parks adds that on peach trees it is better to delay applications until September, except where the borer is very bad, in which case wait until late in May, when soil temperature is over 60 degrees.

College Bulletin Tells How To Get Back To Soil What Goes Up In Smoke
Tobacco takes from the land identically the same elements as does corn, tho in different proportions. Despite a general opinion to the contrary, it is not exceptionally hard on the soil.

These are leading statements from a bulletin on tobacco fertilizers which is to be issued from the Department of Soils at the Ohio State University on June 1. Firman E. Bear, the author, has gone thoroughly into the composition of the weed and his attempt is to indicate what fertilizers seem in Ohio best to replace materials sent up into thin air by smokers everywhere.

"Nicotine, pyridine, ammonia, carbonic and butyric acids, hydrogen sulfide, and certain volatile and aromatic oils go up in smoke at the pleasure of the smoker," he says. "These are largely products built up by the tobacco plant from nitrogen, water, and air."

"Analysis made of tobacco grown in Montgomery County show that the crop required less nitrogen and phosphorus to the acre than did corn and little, if any more potash. It is possible, tho, that the need for limestone will be noted earlier on tobacco than on corn soils."

"While evidence as to the best general tobacco fertilizer is not conclusive, it seems probable that 500 to 1,000 pounds per acre of a 3-8-6 or a 4-10-4 will satisfy requirements of both quality and quantity."

"With that he lets fly with his fists. It was the first quarrel the brothers had ever had, and Bill, seeing now that Tom had really wanted the Widow Johnson, and had been pretending out of deceitfulness, warms up too. They were pretty evenly matched, and they went at it hammer and tongs for nearly half-an-hour. POLICEMAN THROWN FROM BUILDING BY MEN HE SHADOWED

CHICAGO, May 22.—Policeman Jas. Mullen was thrown from the window of a new apartment building on the south side early today by two men who are believed to have been intending to bomb or fire the structure. Mullen suffered injuries which may result in his death.

Work on the new building is said to have been done under the Landis wage award. When Policeman Mullen saw two men enter the building he followed them. He made his way to the third floor and was crossing a narrow temporary bridge spanning a courtyard when the men attacked him and pushed him off. Persons living in the vicinity heard his groans and found him in the courtyard.

Mullen said that after he fell he heard his assailants running away. A general strike which was to have included all the building trades this morning failed to materialize. The fact that Fred Mader, president of the building trades council, is in jail charged with murder in connection with the slaying of two policemen in the recent "terrorist" war is believed to have caused the collapse of the proposed strike.

According to announcement of the state attorney's office, evidence linking Mader, "Big Tim" Murphy, and "Con" Shea with recent activities of alleged labor terrorists has been developed. Presentation of evidence before the grand jury continued today.

Hope that a peaceful settlement of the building trades war might be accomplished soon was seen in reports in labor circles that a complete reorganization of the building trades council is contemplated.

A Girl's Face and Fortune
By JOHN PALMER
Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union

"I wish the men wouldn't pester me so," said Gerlie Miller, as she stepped out of the shop door of Bradbury's.

If ever a girl's face was her fortune, it ought to have been the case with Gerlie. Yet no sooner had she left Bradbury's than she saw the men begin to ogle her.

She passed on with a shrug of her shoulders. In fact, she was too light-hearted to care that day. She had applied to Bradbury's for an increase of salary, and had been turned down. She had given notice. Afterward the manager had asked her to reconsider. Gerlie had laughed at him.

Why not? She had a nice little sum in the savings bank, and she could afford to take a holiday. And just now she was on her way to meet Leslie, at the corner of Fifth avenue.

Leslie was her fancy boy, and they really expected to be married some day. Leslie was going to take her out in his car. Why wouldn't a girl feel good in that bright sunshine, going to meet her boy, even if the men did stare at her.

There he was—that little, persistent fellow who always followed her as soon as she left the shop. For a week past he had been lying in wait for her. Now he came hurrying up. He walked beside her merrily.

"Fine afternoon, Miss Miller," said the little man pleadingly.

"Aw, cut it out!" said Gerlie. "I don't want you hanging around me with your proposals. I know your kind. It only takes a girl's 'no' to make them think they can't do without her."

"Say, that's one for a warm day!" said the little man, wiping his forehead.

"I've got better than that if you don't quit kidding me," said Gerlie.

"Kidding? See here, Miss Miller, I'm honest. I am. Five hundred dollars—"

"Kid, you make me sick!" said Gerlie.

She passed on. The little man knew her well enough, but to others she was only a cipher—a cipher with the most beautiful face that ever drew the stares of a Broadway crowd.

"Oh, Lord, there's the fat one!" said Gerlie.

The fat one was watching for her at the corner of the block. He raised his hat as Gerlie hurried by.

"Say, what's your hurry?" he demanded.

Gerlie turned around.

"See here, once and for all it's 'no' to you and all your kind, you cheap picker," she said indignantly.

"Come and have a little lunch and—"

"—and something fizzy I know about!" said the fat man. "Maybe you'll feel more like talking things over. What's the sense of acting in this way? A girl's got to earn her living, hasn't she?"

"I can earn a better living than you can give me," Gerlie retorted.

Blinding the fat man's outstretched arm, she hurried on, though conscious that he and the little man were following her. And at the corner of the block she gave a little cry of joy. For there stood Leslie.

"Great! Great!" he ejaculated, feasting his eyes upon her beautiful face.

"Oh, Leslie," said Gerlie, half laughing and half crying, "those chaps sure have been pestering me to death. Every time I go out into the street they accost me. There they are, trailing after me now!"

"Which one do you like better?" asked Leslie.

Gerlie wrinkled her forehead. "I guess the fat one's the better proposition of the two. He's got the cash," she answered. "But I'm just sick of them."

"Never mind if you're sick of them or not; you need the money," said Leslie. "If you'll take my advice you'll have a little talk with the fat one and hear what he's got to say."

"Do you think I ought to, Leslie?" asked the girl doubtfully.

"Surest thing you know!" Leslie answered. "You can't live on air, Gerlie, and till we get married we need every cent we can save."

Gerlie turned and marched mournfully up to where the fat man, emitting wheezy coughs, trailed in her direction.

"See here, I've been thinking things over," she said, "and if you're Johnny-on-the-spot with the mazuma, it's up to you. But I want sixty berries per."

"Sixty berries? Whew!" ejaculated the fat one. "Well, I guess you're worth it, girlie. We got to get that face and head of yours in our shop window to advertise our hair tonic, and I always said we wouldn't make big sales till we got that little peach that sat in front of Bradbury's. Sixty's yours, and you can start in Monday."

He took off his hat and wiped his bald head.

LOCAL IS WRECKED MONDAY AT WARSAW

Members of the wreck train from Canton, O., were clearing the wreck Monday afternoon which occurred to the C. A. & C. branch passenger and freight combination train on the C. A. & C. railroad tracks, two miles from Warsaw, Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

The engine and two freight cars were derailed. A defective rail was responsible for the wreck. The train was proceeding slowly and no serious damage was done in the wreck. No one was hurt.

The combination train left Warsaw at 9:20 o'clock. The branch train runs daily between Trivway and Millersburg.

Some of the passengers were forced to remain in Warsaw several hours Monday until a train came from Millersburg and took them to their respective destinations.

WOMAN CHARGED WITH POISONING HUSBANDS AND FATHER-IN-LAW

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., May 22.—That Mrs. Clara Carl, former Cleveland newspaper writer, not only poisoned her second husband and father-in-law, with the sordid aim of inheriting their paltry estate, but also killed her first husband in similar fashion, was expected to be the contention of the state when trial of the alleged female "Blue Beard" opened here today.

Mrs. Carl is accused of the murder of Frank Carl, the second husband by arsenic poisoning. Outstanding points in the strange murder trial, one of the most extraordinary in Indiana's criminal history, are these:

Mrs. Clara Gibson, the defendant, married Frank Carl in Indianapolis, September 14, 1920, under the impression, according to the contention of the state, that he was wealthy.

Frank Carl died at his home at Philadelphia, Indiana, in Hancock-co., 15 miles east of Indianapolis, August 6th, 1921, without leaving any estate.

Alonzo Carl, 87, years old, father of Frank and father-in-law of the defendant, had died just two months previously. The elder Carl, according to the contention of Prosecutor Waldo Gling, of Hancock-co., thwarted Mrs. Carl's alleged plans by leaving property valued at about $3,000 to a son-in-law residing in Denver, Colo., instead of making Frank Carl his heir.

It was stated that the prosecution is prepared to introduce damaging evidence concerning the death of Robert Gibson, first husband of Mrs. Carl, and to introduce a report on the post-mortem examination of the body, exhumed at Nelsonville, Ohio. Gibson's vital organs, it is reported, showed traces of arsenic poisoning.

Mrs. Carl, attributing her indictment to "idle gossip," has entered a plea of not guilty. She is 38 years old.

Mysterious Shooting Of Man And Wife On Picnic Puzzles Police

AURORA, Ill., May 22.—The mysterious circumstances surrounding the death of Eugene Hummer, an accountant, and the wounding of his wife, Mrs. Bessie Hummer, are puzzling the Aurora police today. Hummer and his wife were picnicking in Fox River Park Sunday and were sitting on a bench along the riverbank, when a shot was heard. Mrs. Hummer cried "I'm shot." Hummer sprang from the bench and as he did so a second bullet came from across the river and struck him. He died on the operating table at the Aurora General Hospital. Mrs. Hummer's wound is believed not serious. Police believe the bullets may have been fired by fishermen along the river or perhaps by some party of picnickers too plentifully supplied with "moonshine." Witnesses reported seeing two automobiles speeding away from the park soon after the shots were fired.

Lit 108 Candles With One Match.

In a competition at Walsall (Staffs) a woman lit 108 candles with an ordinary wooden safety match, writes a correspondent. She burned her fingers in doing so, but no other competitor lit half her number of candles.

"Pipe that dame!" whispered Larry the Blood to Skinner. "That kinda looks good to me fer Goldstein! Gee, it makes a feller's mouth water!"

Skinner, lurking with his friend in the purlieu of the Terminal, nodded. The girl, who had apparently just arrived by the late train was wearing a dress that must have cost a cool hundred on Fifth avenue. The little gold watch that was about her wrist would be good for fifty from Goldstein, the fence. As she passed them there was the flash of a great solitaire upon her finger. And she carried a bag.

"I betcha she's got a wad with her," said Larry the Blood. "I'll track her, Skinner, and you keep yer eyes peeled fer the dicks."

A moment later their suspense yielded to pure joy. The girl had not taken a taxi, and she was proceeding on foot down a rather unsavory street, which offered innumerable opportunities to get-rich-quick artists in its dark recesses and doorways.

Larry the Blood had risen to the top of his profession by sheer merit. He could unhook a wrist watch as gently as a mother brushes away a fly from a sleeping child. He could slip off that solitaire as easily as one draws a hair out of milk.

Larry followed her. It was a busy thoroughfare, despite the late hour of the evening. He wanted to choose his time for the theft, and he had to think quickly. He was a speedy sprinter, and the hold-up would be only a matter of fifteen seconds.

She would scream, of course, and then he had to make his getaway. But this offered no insoluble difficulties to Larry. He knew every turning, every empty basement in his haunts. He knew where to dash through a hallway and scale a fence on the other side, emerging through another hallway into the next street.

Still, pedestrians were passing. He had to choose his time.

Mentally he computed. The girl would be a hundred yards away from the nearest pedestrian when she passed Sheenigan's scatter. That was the place. He quickened his footsteps, keeping just far enough behind her not to alarm her.

Some distance behind him trailed his side-kick, Skinner, with his eyes peeled for the dicks.

Suddenly Larry swore. The unexpected had happened. Just as he was beginning to creep upon the girl, she had turned to cross the road.

Two cars were about to pass each other. Two taxis were likewise approaching from opposite directions. With country-bred stupidity, the girl plunged right for the heart of this tangle.

She darted in front of one of the cars without seeing the other, dashed back just in time, and stood mute and agast in the face of one of the oncoming taxis.

The driver was about a dozen feet in front of her. He tried to swerve. The girl jumped back, right in front of him.

"Now what'dya think of that!" muttered Larry the Blood.

And, all his street-sparrow instincts aroused, he darted across the road toward the girl.

There was just an instant to spare. Already the oncoming car was brushing the girl's shoulder, the motorman clanging his bell furiously and making desperate efforts to put on the brakes effectively.

Seizing the girl round the waist, Larry yanked her bodily out of the way of the car and the taxi. The car went on; so did the taxi, the driver shouting abuses as he went down the street.

White, terrified, and shaken, the girl lay for a moment in Larry's arms. Skinner, lurking in the distance, saw the little by-play and grinned. The little watch was against Larry's sleeve. He saw that it was good for a cool hundred at Goldstein's—not fifty.

The diamond solitaire touched his anger. It was a one-carat—a one! Luck was in for Larry, the Blood.

The girl opened her eyes and looked at him gratefully.

"Thank you so much," she said, opening her bag.

Larry, the Blood saw a roll as big as a German sausage.

Extracting a bill, the girl handed it to him, and, turning, made a sudden dash across the road and into a house. Skinner came by.

"Beat it, you mutt!" he hissed.

"Hey, come back, Skinner!" shouted Larry.

Skinner came back, doubt, anger in his eyes.

"What?" he cried. "You mean to tell me you didn't—?"

"Aw, say, Skinner, I'd jest pulled that dame out of the danger-zone. I—I guess she feared me. I—"

"Whadya got in yer hand?" snarled Skinner.

Larry looked at it. "She give me a one-spot, Skinner!" he muttered dolefully.

Shy of Materials.

When Angeline Anglebeam returned home with her writing her mother asked her:

"What did the editor think of your verses?"

"I guess he thought they were all right."

"Did he accept any of them?"

"No," he said he couldn't print any of them just now because he was all out of poetry type."

CHURCHILL SUMMONS IRISH LEADERS FOR DISCUSSION OF PACT

LONDON, May 22. — Winston Churchill, colonial secretary, announced in the house of commons, this afternoon, that in the view of the cabinet it is questionable whether the Irish coalition agreement is in keeping with the treaty of peace with England under which the Irish Free State was established. Irish leaders therefore, he said, have been summoned to London for a conference. "This agreement may affect the validity of the elections under the treaty," Churchill said. Great Britain, the colonial secretary announced, is backing up Ulster with reinforcements and munitions and four new battalions have been landed at Belfast.

WIL 'AYS BLAME FOR 'ITIONS AT IMPORTERS' DOOR

WASHINGTON, May 22 — "If it were not for the conscienceless opposition of the importers and international bankers, who are profiteering by buying cheaply abroad and selling at hold-up prices to the American consumer, the tariff bill would be passed within a few weeks," declared United States Senator Frank B. Willis, Ohio, today.

"As it is, if this conscienceless lobby and propaganda of the importers continues to support a Democratic filibuster it may be months before the American people find relief from present chaotic conditions. Through the country, international bankers are spreading reports that allied nations cannot pay their debts to United States if we enact this tariff bill. This is an absurd argument and a shortsighted policy. In the first place many things those countries can produce we cannot. We can continue to buy from them what we cannot produce here."

"We purchase hundreds of millions of dollars worth of raw materials and finished products from the whole world which we do not produce here. The tariff bill is not going to interfere with this commerce. Let those nations which owe us such vast sums pay us in goods which do not rob the American worker of a livelihood, and the American producer and manufacturer of an opportunity to develop his business in this country."
